The Warm Weather Has Brought Out Another One

THE SONG OF THE LAMP SOCKET

Music: "When I Was a Lad" (Pinafore).

(By Charles Heston Pierson, with apologies to Pinafore.)
(By the Perculator)

When I was a Kid I didn't aspire
To be such a sport as to boil by wire;
I stood on the stove 'til I got hot,
And they called me the darned old coffee pot,
And I boiled and I boiled on the stove and grate
'Til Hotpoint taught me to percolate.

Chorus:
He boiled and boiled on stove and grate—
'Til Hotpoint taught him to percolate.

(By the Toaster)

In days that are gone I used to toast
And I toasted so bad that I cannot boast,
I toasted by wood and coal and gas,
But I scorched and I burned and smoked, Alas!
I reeked with ashes and I caked with grit
'Til they taught me to toast from a lamp sock-et.

Chorus:
He reeked with ashes and caked with grit
'Til they taught him to toast from a lamp sock-et.

(By the Chafing Dish)

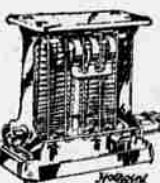

Of things that kill I have cooked my share,
Such as hot Welsh Rarebit that brought despair;
I'm built for lobster and oyster stew,
Or, the water for a toddy I will boil for you;
You push the button, I'll do your wish
For I'm the 'elec-tric Chafing Dish.

Chorus:
We push the button; he does our wish,
For he's the 'elec-tric Chafing Dish.

(By the Iron)

Once on a time, they called me sad;
But now, By Jove, I am always glad;
I scorched and I burnt for the ladies fair
Those unseen garments that are called "white wear",
But I've quit my scorching as all may see
For the heat in my "tummy" is juice to me.

Chorus:
He quit his scorching as all may see,
For the heat in his "tummy" is juice in "he".
