PAULINE FREDERICK IN "SAPHO" FRIDAY AND SATURDAY.

In speaking of the adaptation of Daudet's internationally famous story "Sapho," which he directed recently for the Famous Players, with beautiful Pauline Frederick in the title role, Hugh Ford said: "In treating the very interesting story of 'Sapho,' we have tried to show cause and effect—it is not enough to know that Sapho led a very picturesque life, we must know why she did so, and by glimpsing her early life we soon see the answer to our question. Before she became famous as Sapho, this girl was Fanny Legrand, the daughter of a disreputable coachman, and a typical flower-girl in the streets of Paris, picking up odd bits of change in the various cafes and restaurants while her father squandered most of her earnings as well as his own, on drink. Uneducated, with no refinement of taste and with only a beautifully moulded face to differentiate her from the other flower-girls, and only scenes of strife and turmoil to look back upon when entering the miserable place that was home to her, it is small wonder that she seized the first opportunity to live more luxuriously and failed to weigh the cost of her action.

"We cannot expect a girl who was brought up in such an environment as that to develop any great refinement of taste and as a matter of fact, Sapho does not. It is only that she craves luxury to a greater and greater degree and it is this love of the beautiful and craving for amusement that lead her farther and farther afield. Never having been taught 'right and wrong,' she fails to realize that there is of necessity a barrier between her and the height of her ambitions.

"What we have tried to do in this production, is to catch the spirit of the real Sapho—of whom there are thousands in real life—and put it on the screen. There are many discrepancies between this story and the original, but this was necessary in order to avoid the over-realistic effect of the French original and also to avoid the depressing effect of the unhappy ending. That is why the 'Sapho' of the screen will be a different one from the book or play, while at the same time, we hope we have caught the spirit of this celebrated French girl."

"Sapho" is the Paramount picture at the Arcade theatre Friday and Saturday of this week.

GIRL'S STATEMENT WILL HELP LA GRANDE.

Here is the girl's own story: "For years I had dyspepsia, sour stomach and constipation. I drank hot water and olive oil by the gallon. Nothing helped until I tried buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-i-ka. One spoonful helped me instantly." Because Adler-i-ka flushes the entire alimentary tract it relieves any case of constipation, sour stomach or gas and prevents appendicitis. It has quickest action of anything we ever sold.—Putnam Drug Store.
