HERE'S AN EXAMPLE FOR AMERICAN FATHERS

BY W. F. FORREST
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Paris, April 20.—(By Mail)—If the world war drags on until American youths have fought and fallen in France, American fathers can listen to the example set for them by Sergeant Jean Gaglio, the 62-year-old poilu of the Third Zouaves.

His grey hair showing under the tassled red fez of the famous African regiment which has fought from the campaign of Tunis to Verdun, Sergeant Gaglio is today somewhere in France still getting vengeance from the enemy for the death of his 21-year-old son.

When the war commenced the son marched away with his father's old regiment, the Third Zouaves. Before a month had passed the son occupied a soldier's grave in Belgium. The news soon reached the father. Without hesitation the red pants and red fez of the Zouaves were donned by the aged Gaglio and he hurried direct to the old regiment to fill the very place left vacant by the German bullet which took his only boy.

Five war medals today hang on the old man's breast. Defying the enemy and death hundreds of times, Gaglio has taken toll for his loss and his medals are evidence. He never takes them off. Seriously wounded in the French assault at Tracy-le-Val he was carried to a hospital. Surgeons shook their heads and ordered his immediate discharge from the army. But the old poilu mastered his wounds and demanded the privilege of retaking his place in the line.

Gaglio rejoined his regiment when the German hordes of the Crown Prince were throwing their full force toward Verdun. He is one of those men whose names will live immortal in France for having stemmed the German tide.

After Port Vaux had fallen the old soldier's regiment was transferred to the defence of the works of Thiaumont and the village of Fleury. The furious struggle here for days was the talk of the world. Gaglio was in it all. It won him the rank of sergeant. It also gave him the Medaille Militaire, the fifth evidence of bravery to grace his tunic. Here is how the army order spoke of Gaglio:

"Engaged in the regiment to replace his son who has been killed by the enemy. Has never ceased to give the greatest example of courage and abnegation and to show his white hair in the first ranks. Wounded, he has gained the rank of Corporal in February at Louvemont and that of sergeant in the heavy fighting at Fleury."

Gaglio is still at the Germans getting more revenge for the death of that son.

Sour Stomach.

This is a mild form of indigestion. It is usually brought on by eating too rapidly or too much, or of food not suited to your digestive organs. If you will eat slowly, masticate your food thoroughly, eat but little meat and none at all for supper, you will more than likely avoid the sour stomach without taking any medicine whatever. When you have sour stomach take one of Chamberlain's Tablets to aid digestion.—Adv.

TODAY'S WAR RECIPE.

NOTE—Britain is putting its kitchens on a war basis. Food administrator Hoover says America must do likewise. Beginning today, one of Britain's official war recipes and food slogans will appear daily in the Red Letter. Here's the first:

Surrey Stew.

(From Britain's official win-the-war cook-book.)
Surrey Stew: For four people use one pound of lean beef, two carrots, small bunch of herbs, seasoning to taste, flour to thicken, one tablespoon of drippings, two sliced onions, one turnip, two cloves. Add seasoning to taste before serving, and take out the herbs.
Never serve bread with meat and vegetables.
