takes his "dream woman" back to town, where there is a parting of the ways, but a future development of happiness is indicated.
Enid Markey gives a spirited and realistic rendition of the artist's wife in one of the finest roles she has yet interpreted, while Robert McKim, with the aid of being physically appropriate for the part, depicts nicely the emotions of the artist.

LA GRANDE TO BE JUNGLE TOWN WHEN AL G. BARNES' BIG CIRCUS ARRIVES

More Than 1000 Educated Animals in Circus Stunts.

Imagine over 1000 animals in one assemblage. Imagine looking into the cold, cruel basilisk eyes of hundreds of the jungle's richest treasures. Imagine yourself face to face with these hundreds of lions, tigers, leopards and others of the man-eating beasts. Imagine great herds of elephants, caravans of camels, droves of llamas, sacred oxen and half a hundred monkeys. Imagine you hear the mocking laugh of the vicious hyena as you turn away from the "cat" animals with a shiver. Then think of the rare opportunity you have to experience some of the thrills that have led great men to risk their lives to bring from all corners of the earth every specie of animals known to exist, that you, and me and all the rest may know more of nature's great glories. Then set your alarm clock so as to get up early Tuesday morning and hurry yourself along to see the Al G. Barnes wild animal circus unload its two trains of these wonderful animals, make facts of your fancies and see this great jungle town.

The many hundreds of animals the Barnes show brings to La Grande are not mere animals, but are educated to do more unheard of circus stunts than you could ever possibly imagine. Nowhere else in all the world can there be found an animal circus that has the magnitude and merit of this California show. The winter quarters of this wonderful "Canvas City" and "Jungle Town," is Venice, Cal. So popular has this circus become as a field for study of natural history that school heads are writing the management to include their town in the show's route. La Grande is fortunate as only a few hundred cities of the United States can be covered each year by this great educational amusement enterprise. Each year new routes being scheduled.

Hundreds of the finest and best educated horse, dogs, goats and other domestic animals add to the attractions of the 65 feature act program of the Al G. Barnes circus and there are many human as well as animal clowns, 150 animal educators and 506 attendants. Much good music and a big two-mile long parade at 10:30 a. m. Doors open at 1 and 7 p. m. Show date is Tuesday June 26.

SEATTLE GETS BIG CONTRACTS FOR TEN SHIPS

IT IS REPORTED THAT STEEL COMPANIES ARE BOOSTING PRICES ON STEEL PRODUCTS

Seattle, June 19.—(United Press)—The Construction and Dry Docking Company of this city was awarded contracts for the construction of ten steel ships. Eastern companies were awarded the contracts for wooden ships.

The government will fix prices to be paid for steel used in the construction of the food fleet. It is reported that the steel companies have boosted prices and plan to make enormous profits on government contracts, was learned today.

The government has authority to commandeer all steel products and plans are under way for turning out such products.

CONTRACTS FOR STEEL AND WOODEN VESSEL ARE LET

Washington, June 19.—(United Press)—Additional contracts for the construction of ten complete steel steamers and twenty-four wooden hulls were let today by the United States shipping board.

Refuse Wool Bids.

Heppner Growers have refused to accept offers of 52 to 55 1-2 cents for fine and 58 for coarse wool. About 75,000 pounds were offered there at the first wool auctions of the season in this section but all bids were rejected.

ARCADE

"THE DEVIL'S DOUBLE" AT ARCADE TOMORROW.

Triangle-Kay Bee Drama in Five Parts Features William S. Hart. Reviewed by George W. Graves in Motography.

"The Devil's Double" is a typical William S. Hart picture, that is, it has thrills, colorful atmosphere and splendid character delineation. Mr. Hart is cast as "Bowie" Blake, a brusque, callous-souled faro dealer in a western town, whose destiny is shaped the moment Tarleton, a monomaniac artist, and his patient wife arrive at the place. Tarleton, who has long been looking for a suitable model for his masterpiece, "Lucifer, Son of the Morning," recognizes in Blake the ideal subject he has been seeking.

Blake angrily refuses to humor the artist, but the latter's wife, realizing that disappointment means her husband's death, pleads with Blake, her goodness and purity affecting him like magic. Soon after "Bowie" Blake has begun to pose, the doctor decrees that Tarleton, to preserve his life, must move to a higher altitude. The "bad man," who has begun to feel strange emotions since his association with the first good woman come into his life, agrees to move also, and the odd triangle departs for the mountains.

But Blake finally loses control of himself and insults Naomi. Stung at her scathing denunciation and mortified at his own weakness, he sorrowfully "hits the trail," leaving the woman alone with her husband in the mountain cabin. A solitary ride through the night, however, serves to readjust his thoughts, and realizing the peril of Naomi, left with no one but her feeble-minded husband, turns about, resolved to take his medicine. Blake arrives at the cabin just as two desperadoes are casting lots for the possession of Naomi. They have already shot the unfortunate artist and slashed his masterpiece. Blake makes short work of the two and carries the senseless woman to a cave in the mountains.

Fright having affected her mind, Naomi is like a child, remembering none of the past. But an accident finally restores her memory, at which time Blake, forgetting his good resolutions, immediately claims the girl as his own. Then Naomi exerts her pure womanly influence and thereby helps the man in the towering battle which he suddenly realizes must be fought. Having conquered his passion, Blake
