ARCADE

GREAT COMEDY FILM AT ARCADE SUNDAY ONLY.

John Barrymore, who has been seen here in many pleasing roles will be the attraction at the Arcade Sunday in the great comedy success, "The Man From Mexico." Mr. Barrymore depicts the character of Fitzhew, the gay young married man who still longs for the cabarets and other delights of his bachelor days, and thereby gets himself into dreadful dilemmas from which he extricates himself only by the most wonderful inventions possible to even an untruthful man. All the delicious humor of Mr. Barrymore's delightful personality is at its best in his portrayal of the light-hearted and light-headed, bibulous Fitzhew, whose mythical adventures in Mexico the comedy so laughably unfolds.

Clementina Fitzhew decides to spend a night with her mother, but happening to overhear her husband planning a wonderful time at the Cafe Cleopatra with his friend and boon companion, Majors, she determines to follow them to the gay cafe and watch hubby. Fitzhew and Majors betake themselves in blissful ignorance to the Cleopatra, and proceed to partake not wisely but too well of the flowing bowl. A picture of Clementina falls from Fitzhew's wallet, and is seized by Paquita, a Spanish dancer, who keeps it to tease Fitzhew. Majors persuades Fitzhew to leave while still able to walk, and as they depart Clementina, veiled, accompanied by Farrar, the district attorney's nephew, who is in love with Sallie, Fitzhew's sister, enter. At this juncture the place is raided, and Clementina and Farrar manage to escape, after giving fictitious names to the police; but Clementina's face is seen by Louis, the waiter, who is arrested because he refuses to give her description to the officer. On his way home the joyful but unsteady Fitzhew engages in battle with a cabman, and Fitzhew and the cabby are arrested and taken to court, where Fitzhew talks too much and is given thirty days on the island. When Fitzhew finally realizes what has happened, he is at his wits' end to account for the thirty days' absence to his wife, and being allowed by the authorities to say farewell, tells her he is going to Mexico for a month. Clementina, afraid of being apprehended on account of the raid, and not wishing anyone to know of her own jaunt, is with difficulty restrained from going with him.

From now on, Fitzhew's adventures on the "island," among his fellow-prisoners, his attempts to play on the love of the district attorney's nephew for Sallie, his discovery that the warden has the picture of Clementina, stolen by Paquita, and is in love with Mrs. Fitzhew, his hungry attempts to steal from the other convicts, his meeting with Louis, the waiter at the Cleopatra, who wants to kill the warden and escape, the visit of Clementina to the prison not knowing her husband is there, and the melodramatic jail delivery, culminating in Fitzhew's triumphant recapture of the escaping prisoners and his congratulations by the authorities, leave nothing to be desired in the way of mirth-provoking situations. His return home at the

Gasoline Economy Contest Another Maxwell Triumph

The greatest demonstration ever staged by any automobile company—thousands of Maxwells, here and all over the United States and Canada, took part in the history-making runs—U. S. Liberty Bond Prizes to be awarded at once.

Once more—on an international scale—the Maxwell's economy has been put beyond quibble or question.

Each had to carry with him on the run three official observers, named by us, who certified to the result.

Thousands of Maxwell cars, equipped with the famous red contest gasoline tanks, have made one gallon runs.

$50,000 in U. S. Liberty Bonds to be Awarded Now

The Maxwell Motor Sales Corporation set aside the $50,000 in bonds.

The figures are not yet compiled—are not all in

Half of the bonds are to go to the 500 Maxwell owners who made the best one-gallon mileages.

—but we know from the returns already received that splendid mileage averages have been made

The other half of the bonds will be apportioned among Maxwell dealers for assisting in this immense undertaking.

—that the Maxwell's position as world economy champion has been made more than ever secure.

Splendid One Gallon Run Made by Maxwell Owner Here

Who Don't You Own a World Champion Maxwell?

Among the best scores made in the local red tank runs were the following:

Maxwell economy is proved ten times over.

E. J. Conrad, on June 26 made 30 1-10 miles on one gallon of gasoline.

A Maxwell will go further on a gallon of gasoline than any other 5-passenger car built.

A. J. Feik, on June 23 made 21 6-10 miles. This was a new car.

It is mechanically right. The highly efficient, handsome Maxwell touring car sells for $665, f. o. b. Detroit.

The contest was limited to owners of Maxwells, driving their own cars.

Come to our sales rooms and buy your Maxwell now.
