

Your Other Camera
A Vest Pocket Kodak

Although you have a grandfather's clock in the hall, a Dresden clock on the drawing room mantel, a chronometer in your motor car, and an eight-day clock on your office desk, you always wear a watch. And the probabilities are that your watch is more accurate than any of your other time pieces.

Similarly you may have and carry other time pieces—You wear a Vest Pocket Kodak. It's the reliable, inobtrusive, little Kodak that you can always have with you for the unexpected that is sure to happen. And it is as accurate as a watch.

Elgin News Items

Elgin, July 2.—(Special)—The Elgin Recorder says:

Ivan Hug severely cut one of his fingers while at work in the box factory Wednesday. He let his hand get in conflict with a saw and it was a miracle that he was not seriously injured.

Eddie Holmes, who is employed with one of the local section crews, was the victim of a painful accident this week in which he had the end of one of his fingers nearly mashed off and another badly bruised. The crew had piled a lot of rail plates on the hand car to move to another point and piled the plates so high that when the handle of the car came down on the side on which Holmes was pumping his fingers were caught between it and the plate. One finger was mashed to a pulp down to the first joint and the other severely mashed.

John Gawith, Sr., left Monday morning for Baker in response to a message informing him that his son, John, Jr., had been painfully injured. The father received a telegram Sunday evening, which gave only limited particulars, stating that his leg was broken and that he was otherwise injured. The injured man, in company with his family, visited here only a few days ago. They were en route to Nevada by auto and stopped in U. S. Flag To Be Given To Y. M. C. A.

National Ensign Used In Draping Casket of William Claude Haisten At His Funeral To Be Given to the Y. M. C. A.; At Request of Parents.

Secretary King, of the Y. M. C. A., has received the following letter from Mr. and Mrs. Fred D. Haisten, of this city:

La Grande, Or., June 18th, 1917. Mr. J. Garfield King, Sec'y Y. M. C. A.

Dear Mr. King—The Navy Department, Mare Island, Calif. in a letter of May 25th advised us that the Secretary of Navy authorized the Department to issue direct to us, or at our request to any patriotic society we may designate, the national flag (United States Ensign No. 7) which was used in draping the casket of our precious boy, William Claude Haisten, at his funeral held by the Navy Department, at Mare Island, Calif., May 22nd, and we asked that this flag, the Stars and Stripes, which our boy loved and honored and under its inspiration while in the service of our country, he died; be presented to the La Grande Y. M. C. A. in memoriam of him.

This splendid organization which he loved and lived in and with for so long, that did so nobly develop in our son, as it has and will do for so many other boys and girls, the highest ideals of life, health, happiness and loyalty to our country and the emblem of her glory—the Stars and Stripes—we feel that could be presented to your organization.

We hope from this that our young people will gain an inspiration of greater love for our country, the greatest government given by God to each one and all ever rally to her standard at all times, in peace and in war.

In sincere appreciation, we are, MRS. ALEENE E. HAISTEN, FREDERICK D. HAISTEN.

program, and this evening appear again, first on the program. This is the first and only male quartet of the week.

Dr. Bohn This Afternoon. The apt attention that Dr. Frank Bohn, war correspondent in Europe, got this afternoon, indicated the interest with which his lecture today was received. He handles the great war problem with learning, gained from keen observation at close range. Day Praises Goddard. "Go as strong as you like in boosting James Goddard, the world's biggest baritone, who comes here tomorrow night. He stands six feet five inches, perfectly proportioned, and is as big of voice as he is of body. He is a wonderful singer."

In these words Elias Day, the veteran entertainer who pleased a big audience last evening at the park with his old-time form of story telling and impersonation, puts Mr. Goddard before the Chautauqua patrons as a great star. "But to speak of Mr. Goddard is not enough," continued Mr. Day this morning. "Reck Day, the violinist, is in a class by herself."

"Polly of the Circus" is the big feature of tomorrow afternoon with Annie Theresse Devault as the star. This bright and popular number will be handled by Miss Devault in a most charming way—of that there is no doubt. Like this afternoon, the program tomorrow afternoon will be especially inviting.

Own Children to Show. Previous to Miss Devault's rendition of "Polly of the Circus" there will be a special program by the Junior Chautauqua children. That means La Grande children, Miss Devault in charge of the Junior Chautauqua this year, will direct this program and especially because "Our Own Children" will be the performers, this promises to be a fine feature. Miss Lewin will surprise the parents with the talent of the children—she has found many bright stars among her Chautauqua patrons.

SCOTLAND IS GLAD THAT AMERICA ENTERED WORLD WAR

Newspapermen Visit Edinburgh En Route To Join British Cruiser Fleet—American Flag in Cheered—German Prisoners in Castle—Zeppelin Bomb Narrowly Escapes Killing Von Tirpitz Son.

(The following is the first of a series of three mail stories by Lowell Mellett, United Press Staff Correspondent—telling of war conditions as seen by him on a recent trip through Scotland.)

BY LOWELL MELLETT (United Press Staff Correspondent) Edinburgh, June 10.—(By mail)—Scotland is glad America came in. Edinburgh proved it today to a group of peripatetic newspapermen.

The newspapermen, stopping in Scotland's capital en route to the British cruiser fleet, received a welcome that could scarcely have been exceeded had their number included President Wilson and Andrew Carnegie. They were vastly bewildered for awhile but the meaning became clear in time. Scotland has been greatly thrilled by the action of the United States and today's humble visitors offered the first opportunity for a real celebration.

This accounted for the bringing forth of the American flag. It accounted for the elaborately arranged—though simply menued—banquet, with the Lord Provost of Edinburgh presiding and the Lord Chief Justice of Scotland speaking and every dignitary of the state banqueting hall would hold occupying a place at the table. It explained the serious session of the city magistrates on the question of whether the dinner should be wet or dry, a question that finally was settled in the manner it was sought to be most pleasing to the visitors.

A committee of municipal magistrates themselves took the newspapermen in tow, led them to the tipmost of Edinburgh castle and the innermost sanctum of Holyrood palace. And local newspapermen accompanied to record the impressions of "the distinguished American journalists."

Everything partook of the nature of a peace-time holiday, rather than serious war-time business, an illusion early achieved in Scotland where the war has meant actual prosperity, instead of the reverse. Desolation has been brought to thousands of homes but there is no other material evidence of the war, save for faded Highland soldiers in the streets and occasional blue uniforms of convalescents sitting in the sunny parks. Growing grass and moss have hidden the slight scar on one facade of Edinburgh castle, the mark of a Zeppelin bomb dropped early in the war. The castle still prisoners from time to time German prisoners brought in by naval vessels. Whether Admiral von Tirpitz's son is still held there the canny hosts did not say, but admitted that had the bomb which glided off the castle been true to its purpose there would have been mourning at the fireside of the arch exponent of terrorism. This is presuming that Admiral von Tirpitz knows what most Germans apparently do not, that the Zeppelin attack on the castle failed. Many prisoners brought there refuse to believe they are in Edinburgh castle, insisting that it has been destroyed. Edinburgh had little else to show of war's effect, but a great deal to show of her gratitude toward America. She made this plain in so many ways that when the unlucky correspondent called on to respond to the toast "Our American Guests" felt the necessity to establish his own connection with this hospitable country, he was compelled to refer to a Scottish forerunner who departed Americanward only a few jumps ahead of a Scottish sherriff. The closeness of the relations between Scotland and America was emphasized again and again at the evening reception. One Edinburgher after another asked for information concerning relatives in various parts of the United States whom he thought some of the visitors might know. And when the speeches to the King and the President drunk and the functionary in sacred robes had led the three "hip, hip, hoorays," that apparently constituted his principal official duty, the city and state dignitaries clasped hands with their guests around the table and sang a song worth going all the way to Edinburgh to hear: "Will ye noo eoom again?"
