NO CHANCE TO NURSE AT THE FRONT UNLESS TRAINED

Washington July 10.—(United Press)—For the average American woman who wants to help her country in this war by going to the front as nurse there is no hope of her ever realizing her wish. Only graduate trained nurses are chosen by the American Red Cross for war hospital service. And nurses' aids are also specially trained and chosen with the extreme care. In previous wars, women nurses were not infrequently seen on the battle field. In war today they never get any closer to the front than the base hospital, which generally is out of sound of the cannonading. The machine gun and the barrage of modern warfare has forced the retirement of women into safer fields. For the first time in the country's history the United States is sending to the front a modern hospital equipment. Uncle Sam's sick and wounded in France will receive as good care as they could get in any hospital in the United States. The best surgeons and the best nurses in the country are going with the troops. When the American Red Cross was organized in 1905 the principle was adopted that not merely trained nurses but nurses of character and experience vouched for by recognized hospitals could be enrolled in the Red Cross service. She receives $50 per month while in service. Her hours of work at the base hospital are irregular but mostly long. General Pershing's contingent probably will be served by army nurses who were on the Mexican border.

One graduate nurse to every 200 soldiers is required. About 5 per cent of an army is sick or wounded all the time. In a war hospital there is usually one nurse for every ten patients. An American Red Cross nurse in war service receives $50 per month. The personnel of a base hospital unit is 50 active and 15 reserve nurses and 25 active and 25 reserve nurses' aids; proportionately smaller number for the navy detachments, with the emergency groups consisting of small reserves easily mobilized and available either for army or navy hospitals.

For the Patriotic Housewife. Every patriotic housewife plans to preserve all the food possible for next winter's use. The canning of fruit and making of jam and jelly is a familiar operation, but not all housekeepers are accustomed to put up vegetables. Ask at the public library for the following pamphlets and magazine articles, or write to the Department of Agriculture at Washington, for Farmers' bulletins; or to O. A. C. at Corvallis, for their Extension bulletins on this subject. U. S. Farmers' bulletin 359. Canning vegetables in the home. Delineator, Aug. 1915. New way to can vegetables. Delineator, Sept. 1916. THE FORUM

A Statement.
La Grande, July 9.—(To the Editor of The Observer.)—I wish you would publish the following letter in justice to myself, as a wrong impression has gotten out.
Since last school election when I was candidate for school director I have been severely criticized by my Catholic friends for the position I took, to wit: "That I would oppose the appointment of any Catholic teacher, for this reason and this reason only, that the Roman Catholic system was against our public schools." I hereby challenge any Catholic to come out public in the paper and say that that statement, to wit: "That the Roman Catholic system is against our public schools" is not true. All I ask is that they publicly deny the truth of same in the paper, then the burden of proof is upon me and I will prove it in the paper.
Another thing, they said I could not give the children free school books. I know it and never said I could. I said: "I pledge myself to work for free text books for all grades from the first to the eighth inclusive." And I would have. I would have initiated a petition to get the question on the ballot and then worked for it, and IT WOULD HAVE PASSED I have no doubt.
I thank all my friends for voting for me. Some have said I could have been elected had I not stated my platform. I am not that kind of a man. I do my work in the open, and the way the Catholic votes showed against me shows that they believed that I meant what I said, and believe me, I did.

Farmers Daughter Dons Overalls.
Spokane, Wash., July 10.—(Special)—Miss Thurza V. Tucker, the 20 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Tucker, living eight miles southwest of Medical Lake, Wash., has answered the Nation's call by donning overalls and pitching in to help her father plow his fields and raise wheat. Mr. Tucker purchased a new tractor this spring and she has taken entire charge as its engineer.
"I had to lay by a number of times on account of rain, and lost about a week," said Miss Tucker, "but I finally finished. Conditions were not favorable for making a good record, but I am very pleased with the machine."
