Real Live Movie Actress Will Soon Visit La Grande

Portland has had the honor of entertaining moving picture stars. Now La Grande is to have the honor of entertaining one of the famous stars and also the pleasure of meeting a very charming woman face to face and of hearing a talented light opera singer.

The Arcade theatre has confidence that the people here are just as anxious and willing to see a real live movie star as anybody else and at a large expense they have arranged to have Miss Myrtle Stedman, Paramount star, appear at the Arcade on Sunday and Monday. She will also be out to the Speed 'Em Up races Sunday.

Miss Stedman will sing several selections during both evening shows and Monday matinee. "It's a cinch she doesn't have to work in pictures for a living," was the apt way one fan in one of the towns she appeared in expressed himself after he had listened to Miss Stedman's singing. She doesn't appear in one of those monologues, so disastrous from bashfulness, exaggerated modesty, or lack of self-possession, or, worse yet, a too vivid expression of conceit. Miss Stedman sings—really sings.

That's the surprising part of her appearance. One expects to see a beautiful woman, handsomely gowned—the films promise that—but to hear a star of the silent drama burst forth into melody that might be envied at an operatic revel, that's the surprise in store for the public. She possesses a splendid dramatic soprano voice and sings with a clarity of note and a depth of expression that brushes away any thought that Myrtle Stedman was forced into pictures because she lost her voice.

by the wife, in which she sets forth "the approximate amount of her separate income and the independent income of their child or children during the last preceding year, exclusive of any sums received from her husband and exclusive of any gifts to her or her child or children, the same being merely the income derived from the separate or independent income property of, or property held in trust for, her, the child or children."

When a wife files a supporting affidavit it must be upheld by an affidavit from a head of a family residing in the local area. When a wife does not support, but herself makes application for a husband's discharge she must cover the same ground and have two supporting affidavits from heads of families residing in the local area, unless the wife lives outside this area, in which case the affidavits may come from the area in which she lives.

When neither the wife nor the husband makes the application it may be made by some one "personally well acquainted with such husband and his wife, child or children," who has "personally made an investigation of the sources of income of the wife." The person filing such an application must present therewith the marriage certificate or a certified copy of it, or submit the affidavits of two persons who were present when the marriage took place.

Similar procedure must be followed in the case of "any son of a widow dependent upon his labor for support," and in the case of the "son of aged or infirm parent or parents dependent upon his labor for support," for the "father of a motherless child or children under sixteen years of age dependent upon his labor for support" and for the "brother of a child or children under sixteen years of age who has (have) neither father nor mother and is (are) dependent upon his labor."

What Labor Is.

"Labor" is defined in this way:

"For the purpose of these rules and regulations 'labor' shall be construed to mean bodily or mental exertion. It may be either physical or intellectual; it may be professional, mechanical, commercial, clerical or agricultural, and each of these forms of labor may exist under modifications or in combination with each other. The means for the support of the dependent or dependents must be produced by this labor, whatever its character. It need not be wholly produced from it, but it must be mainly so. A dependent receiving support from a person whose income is derived from dividends or rents cannot be said to be dependent upon his labor, but if that income were entirely the fruit of professional or physical toil then such person would be dependent upon his labor.

"For the purpose of these rules and regulations," it is added, "by the term 'aged or infirm' parent or parents is meant those persons who from old age and infirmity are disabled from earning the means of supporting themselves and who by reason of such age or infirmity have become dependent for the means of support upon the person in respect of whom the claim is made.

"If any person claiming exemption or discharge shall file affidavits in support thereof, one such affidavit should contain the statement that he binds himself to report at once in person to the local board by which he was called and notify it whenever the conditions entitling him to exemption or discharge cease to exist."

Conscientious objectors must, within ten days after filing their claims, present affidavits setting forth:

That the applicant "is a member in good faith and in good standing of a well recognized religious sect or organization (giving the name thereof) organized and existing May 18, 1917, and whose then existing creed or principles forbid its members to participate in war in any form, and that the religious convictions are against war or participation therein, in accordance with the principles of said organization."

Must Support Contention.

This must be supported by an affidavit from the clerk or minister of the organization, and "in case any such person substantiates in the opinion of the local board his claim, such local board shall issue a certificate stating that such person shall not be required or compelled to serve in any capacity except in some capacity declared by the president to be noncombatant."

"Those found to be morally deficient" are to be discharged "upon presentation by any person to the local board by which he was drawn for service of a certificate of the clerk of any court of record in the United States showing that the record of such court discloses that such person was at a time stated convicted of felony and sentenced in such court."

The district boards provided for are to have reviewing powers for the most part. They will, however, have original authority in the matter of "all questions or claims for including or excluding or discharging persons arising under the following provisions of the act of congress authorizing the president to exclude or discharge persons engaged in industries, including agriculture, found to be necessary to the maintenance of the military establishment or the effective operation of the military forces or the maintenance of national interest during the emergency."

All claims of this sort must be supported by affidavits setting forth that the applicant "is actually engaged in a particular, designated industrial enterprise necessary to (any of the three things stated in the act); that his continuance therein is necessary to the maintenance thereof and that he cannot be replaced by another person without direct substantial material loss and detriment to the adequate and effective operation of the enterprise in which he is engaged."

one of the fifteen distinguished universities and colleges of the country offering military training. By a recent order of the government all the cadets will receive complete military uniforms from the U. S. government, and all seniors and juniors who join the R. O. T. C. will be given an allowance for subsistence amounting approximately to $100 a year.

Professor Horner recalls the following alumni of the Oregon Agricultural college from Union county: Judge Thomas H. Crawford, who is the oldest O. A. C. graduate in Eastern Oregon, having received his diploma in 1874; Lois Stewart, Dr. W. W. Smith, Ralph Chenault, James Dobbin, Zoe H. Golden, Frank W.
