EMPEROR OF THE SAHARA SHOWS UP IN NEW YORK

New York, July 27.—(Special)—Jacques Lebaudy, "the man who would be king," better known as "The Emperor of the Sahara" has bobbed up again and kept the people of Oyster Bay, L. I., in a "spy" terror for a week.

A week ago there drifted into Oyster Bay harbor on the high tide a craft more rakish, more queerly rigged, more unlike a ship than anything that ever sailed the China Seas. She anchored squarely in the main channel.

The secretive, lone skipper soon had all Oyster Bay in arms against him because of his haughty manner. His eccentric actions caused the circulation of all kinds of spy stories. Citizens demanded that the sailing ship be removed from the channel. The skipper contemptuously consented and anchored as closely as possible to Colonel Roosevelt's home. This was too much for the folk of the town. They were organizing a searching board to investigate the mysterious craft yesterday when the stranger appeared at the Courthouse and demanded the arrest of about half of the population.

A curious constable seized him, and revealed the skipper to be none other than Lebaudy, who in 1903 set up a kingdom in the Sudan and proclaimed himself "Emperor of the Sahara." His identification was made by a card in his pocket. One thousand dollars in cash was also found. The authorities were very much puzzled as to what they would do with "The Emperor." While they were debating the question the high tide rose. And on the high tide Lebaudy set the series of small sails on his vessel and drifted slowly out of the harbor in the direction of Glen Cove.

Lebaudy is a French millionaire. He sank a fortune in his efforts to establish a kingdom all his own in the Sudan. For a few thrilling hours he reigned supreme on a throne of ivory and jewels. He had a fight with bandits and was rescued from Arabian captivity by the crew of a French cruiser. His throne gone, he returned to London, via Paris. He has escaped from many sanitariums.
