Studebaker SUPERIORITIES —a Safer Rear Axle Studebaker engineers have been able to perfect the full-floating Rear Axle by exhaustive study of the performance of hundreds of thousands of Studebaker cars under every imaginable condition of service. It stands to reason that the Studebaker full-floating axle is safest. Think a minute; with Studebaker the axle shaft turns the wheels—nothing else. The axle-housing bears the weight of the car and takes up side thrusts from turns and skids. To a great extent, in the semi-floating type and altogether in the live axle, these strains are borne by the axle shaft itself. In any other type there's always danger of a broken shaft and a wheel coming off. So you see it is simply a matter of mechanical fact, that the Studebaker full-floating rear axle is safest. Let us explain in detail this point of Studebaker value. Island City M. & M. Co. La Grande, Oregon

Letters From The Front

(Letter from V. R. Bainbridge, of the U. S. Navy, to his father B. Bainbridge, of Ladd Canyon.) Somewhere on the Atlantic, U. S. S. Frederick. June 21, 1917.

Dear Father:—Will drop you a few lines tonight to let you know I am fine and dandy and hope you are the same. I suppose you are busy harvesting by this time. What kind of a crop did you have? I haven't received a letter for a long time, the last one I got you still had snow that day it was written; but it isn't because you folks haven't written. We haven't had any mail from the states for over a month, but expect to get some next week. I am looking for about ten letters. I am going to get a whole day off to read them. I was ashore yesterday and believe me I sure had some time. Three of us got a car and looked the city over right, and talk about your pretty places, I can't describe it. The only thing I am sorry of is that you folks can't see it. I am lucky. I wouldn't have missed seeing the places I've seen for anything. I am sure glad I joined the navy. Every time I see a battleship from another nation it makes me prouder than ever that I am an American; and believe me, the people in this part of the world think the Americans are the best people in the world. When we go ashore they turn the town over to us. And if a sailor gets drunk (which doesn't happen very often) in place of arresting him they take him back to the ship. And they all hate the Germans, believe me. I wish I could tell you where I am but its against the regulations, so I shall have to wait till I get home. I'll have some real tales to tell this time. Have I out-traveled you yet? Well don't forget to answer soon hoping you are all well. I will close. With love to all. Address: V. R. BAINBRIDGE, U. S. S. Frederick, Via New York.
