

We know how well you like a variety to choose from in

Coats and Suits

So we see to it our advance displays present a variety of styles wide enough to satisfy the preferences of the women of our community.

The Coats and Suits now shown here demonstrate our ability to provide the favored modes, for here you'll find garments for young women, those who desire the conservative, those who want fancy models and for elderly women.

In Coats you may select

Good roomy styles in wool, velour, kersey, broadcloth, pom-pom, crystal cloth, diagonal cheviots, velour du nord, Egyptian seal and soft lustrous plushes. There's a wealth of styles with many new collars; exclusive belted features and fur trimmed ones.

The Choicest of Suits

Plain tailored, slightly trimmed tailored and fancy suits greet you in poplins, gaberdines, serges, tricotine, burella and broadcloth, and the shades, these are the most wanted—concord, Russian, Pekin, green, navy, taupe, beet root, amethyst, African brown, black, Hague.

These Suits and Coats are now ready for your inspection.

The Child's Education

The opening of a new school term naturally directs attention to education

We take pride—and justly so—in our public school system; but the lessons of life are not all learned in the schoolroom.

Home influence plays a mighty part in shaping the child's character and destiny.

The thrift habit, once firmly instilled by the parent's example, stands throughout the years as a guidepost on the highway to success.

EDITORIAL

LABOR DAY.

Labor Day is a day that is peculiar to America. America delights in honoring men and women that do things; America respects and honors labor, the producers. So it is fitting that today we pause and reflect upon the duties and responsibilities we all have of keeping industry going, of being sympathetic to our fellowman, of being sturdy and loyal in our duties as citizens. We have learned by bitter cost and experience as a Nation, that we are closely bound together, that we cannot injure one class without hurting another, that prosperity comes from the welfare of the masses, that we cannot starve and oppress labor or any other class without injuring the Nation. So when it comes to war, we cannot fight a successful war without labor, and loyalty has it responded. Many of the real battles of the war will be won in the factories, the shipyards, the steel yards, the munitions factories. Working together, driving together, with all the force and genius of the American people, avoiding bitter disputes and class hatreds, how can America fail at this time?

MAY MURRAY IN HUMOROUS PHOTOPLAY

At a wedding recently in one of the fashionable churches, immediately after the ceremony, the groom seemed suddenly panicstricken as if he had forgotten what custom demanded of him next, until the gentle voice of the bride was heard prompting at his elbow: "Isn't it customary to kiss the bride after the service?" Whereupon the young man, suddenly galvanized into life, instead of "obeying that impulse" as Life would say, immediately began a hurried search through all of his pockets. Answering the anxious inquiry of friends he begged for a pencil and paper and at once set about copying his wife's remark, admitting it was "just what he needed for a climax for his new novel."

Now it was the bride's turn to be "galvanized into action" and she—but the rest we will leave you to find out for yourself at the Arcade theatre today and tomorrow when "At First Sight," a Famous Players-Paramount picture will be presented, starring Mae Murray. Because you see, the whole thing occurred at a rehearsal for this very production and is incorporated in its very humorous and piquant plot, which was written by the well-known George Middleton.
