HOW I AM DOING MY BIT TO HELP AMERICA WIN THE GREAT WAR

By EUGENE E. POTTER.
Locomotive Engineer New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad.
(Written for the United Press.)

New York, Oct. 5—Staying on the job and saving coal are my two most valuable contributions to the country in its present crisis.

Railroad labor has never been as scarce as it is today. The draft has taken many men and many more have volunteered. The railroad regiments which are helping France were recruited from the employees of the railroads; and the roads were short-handed before these men volunteered. The first great duty of every railroad man is, therefore, to work as hard as he can and to remain on the job.

I have been railroading for over 40 years. I am at the age where many men retire, and I have been working much longer than many other railroad men who are receiving pensions. But I'm as fit as a fiddle and able to do a full day's work with as little effort as a man 30 years younger. As long as I'm physically able to work I'm going to work. And during the present war I intend to see to it that I keep physically fit.

As a locomotive engineer I have another way of helping. This is in the saving of coal. The man who doesn't know anything about railroading would be surprised to know how easy it is to waste coal in a locomotive. A delay on a passing siding, poor firing, the actual running of the engine, careless firemen allowing coal to fall off the sides of tanks and each side of gangway, hooking fire too much, all these are causes of coal waste.

"I run my locomotive so I can get the most out of her with the least amount of coal. The saving of one shovelful in eight means about one ton a day and with our more than 1200 engines in service on this road, together with all other roads in the United States, the total would mean many thousands of tons saved daily.

Another important factor is the necessity for manly honesty among railroad men in reporting violations of safety precautions, such as improper flagging, failure to use fuses at proper time. Accidents would be reduced if engineers and other railroad men would only help to bring up the standard of efficient and safe flagging by reporting to the officials of the company violations of the rules. Accidents are not only dangerous, but they decrease the efficiency of the road in doing the work necessary for the Government and the people at a time when every ounce of effort must be effectively used.

The way to win this war is for every man to co-operate and do his share to the best of his ability. We have to help each other, and we all have to bend a little.

The railroads are doing a gigantic work for the Government. They are doing it well, and all railroad men are working together for one object—the winning of the war.
