Mrs. Outman and Mrs. Keuse are visitors at the Junction the early part of the week.
Mr. and Mrs. Bean made a visit to their son who is foreman of the logging camp.

Mechanical Genius.
A celebrated engineer being examined at a trial, where both the judge and counsel tried in vain to browbeat him, made use of the expression in his evidence, "The creative power of a mechanic" on which the judge rather tartly asked him what he meant by "the creative power of a mechanic."
"Why, my lord," said the engineer, "I mean that power which enables a man to convert a horse's tail into a judge's wig!"

Another Royal Disaster.
"Our baby is a thorough democrat," said the father proudly.
"Umph!" said the not overinterested friend.
"Yes," expanded the father, "he was playing with the chessmen the other day, and now we can't find the kings and queens."—Buffalo Express.

The Serene Uninformed.
"What a man doesn't know doesn't hurt him," said the superficial philosopher.
"No," replied the cynical statesman, "but if he gets into a responsible position what he doesn't know is likely to hurt a whole lot of other people."—Washington Star.

Rain as a Sanitary Agent.
Frequent and moderate rain is an effective sanitary agency. It cleanses the ground and air. It absorbs and carries down into rivers and thence to the sea the excess of carbonic acid produced from fires and light and other sources.

Liberia.
It is generally asserted that Liberia, the west African republic, has one of the hottest climates known on the face of the globe, and certainly there are few spots on the map which have a greater rainfall. There are two rainy seasons, one in June and July and the other in October and November, and the yearly downpour amounts to nearly thirteen feet of water.
The country is rather remarkable for its flora and fauna. There is one species of tree that grows to a height of 200 feet and twenty-two species of trees, shrubs and vines that produce rubber. Among the animals encountered in the wild districts are the pigmy hippopotamus, the bay thighed Diana monkey and the zebra antelope.

One Armed Daly.
Among Americans who have achieved athletic prominence, though minus an arm or leg, Hugh Daly, the phenomenal one armed pitcher for the Cleveland National league team in the early eighties, is perhaps the best known. The older generation of baseball fans remember Daly's pitching was unusually "crazy." The records show that in 1883 he pitched a no hit game against Philadelphia, and the next year he established an average strike out record for one season that still holds good.
During that year he took part in fifty-four games and struck out 464 batsmen, giving him an average of .850 per cent. The nearest approach to this record was that of the late Rube Waddell, who pitched thirty-nine games in 1914, fanned 323 batters and made a percentage of .830.—Exchange.

The Rocking of Lake Erie.
The 250 mile trough of Lake Erie lies approximately in the direction of the west to southwest winds which prevail in that part of the country. Thus the lake offers an excellent opportunity for studying the effects of the wind upon a large body of inclosed water, and very interesting these effects sometimes prove. Rhythmic gusts produce a rocking motion, and great blows from the west or southwest sweep the liquid body of the lake eastward and sometimes cause a rise of eight feet or more at Buffalo in the course of a few hours. As soon as the maximum force of the gale has passed the water swings back. Continued rockings are observed on days when the strength of the wind fluctuates.

Apple or Onion?
No one would for a moment imagine any one mistaking an onion for an apple. But don't be too sure. Some day when you have nothing else to do cut a small square of onion and a square of apple of the same size, close your eyes and hold your nose tightly and then get some one to hand you one of the squares without telling you which one it is. You would be well advised not to wager any money on being able to tell by chewing which it is. The explanation is that a large part of what we call taste is really smell.—Pearson's Weekly.

The Lobster's Color.
The shell of the lobster is tinted with a black or bluish pigment secreted by the true skin, which also gives out the carotene matter after each molt, so that blue and pigment are bound together. This pigment becomes red, pink and intense in water at a temperature of 212 degrees F., and the same effect is produced by the action of alcohol, ether and various acids.

In the Sweet By and By.
Some day we are going to see a motion picture in which the leading lady expresses anxiety in some other way than by clutching her fist and pressing it somewhere between the throat and the wishbone.—Albany Knickerbocker Press.

INEFFICIENT BOARDS CAUSE SUFFERING
(United Press.)
Camp Lewis, Wash., Oct. 12.—Careless or inefficient local exemption boards have caused delay and inconvenience here and much suffering throughout the coast states, army officers said here today.
Hundreds of men who have been passed as physically fit by the local boards must be returned, although their physical ailments were so pronounced they were even unable to do the easier work about the camp. One day's rejections ran 10 1-2 per cent of the total number examined recently.
The number of men physically unfit is steadily increasing, indicating that the local boards are growing even more lax. The average rejections now is between 7 and 8 per cent. A month ago it was 3 per cent.

Mustering officers also declare that hundreds of men have been sent here who should never have left their wives and children. Some of the men have gone to officers with pitiable stories of wives without money or friends; of starving children and cheerless homes.
These cases are so deplorable Orno E. Tyler, camp secretary of the Y. M. C. A. has appealed to high military authorities for an honorable discharge for men with needy families and is arranging for temporary relief for the families until the war department acts. Camp officers are powerless to aid.

The Dealers Have Answered

Mr. Manufacturer! Mr. National Distributor! Mr. Advertising Agent! you frequently ask the question: "What kind of advertising interests the local dealer?"

The merchants in this and 400 other cities of North America have answered your question this week.

They have put the goods in the window and have told you why they have put them there.

The products they displayed were all newspaper advertised products.

They chose these because they know it pays storekeepers to co-operate with newspaper advertising.

They want to encourage more manufacturers to use advertising in the daily newspapers.
