STAR

"STRAIGHT SHOOTING"

Stirring Five-Reel Butterfly Number
Features Harry Carey—A Wonderful Story of Western Plains.

The old days of the West live again in such exceptionally realistic offerings as "Straight Shooting." It tells a picturesque narrative of the days when cattlemen made war upon homesteaders. Harry Carey is featured in his familiar role of "Cheyenne Harry," a bad man with a good heart. He has previously done some splendid work in this part, and this offering is a step ahead both for himself and his supporting company of rough riders and Western character performers.

The story itself, written by George Hively and produced by Jack Ford, is a clean, cut, straight-forward tale, whose thrilling moments would seem fictitious except for the fact that they are bolstered up by actual tradition. It would be hard to get into the picture any more stirring or straight incidents than have actually occurred in the warfare of the years. Both the author and the director are to be congratulated upon having selected compelling scenes and situations for the production. The Western panorama is set forth in clear, attractive photography and the riding and fighting episodes are executed with dash and enthusiasm. So successful is the offering that it deserves to rank with "The Virginians" and "Whispering Smith." It has not the humor of the former, but it has a strong human quality and treats the latter in intensity and conviction.

George Beall and Molly Malone play the old settler and his daughter, whose home is made the scene of numerous stirring events. Others in the cast are Duke Lee, Victor Perry, Ted Brooks, Hoot Gibson, Milt Brown and a large cast of rough riders.

AT ARCADE, MONDAY AND TUESDAY

ARCADE

At the Arcade Theatre, commencing Monday, George M. Cohan, the popular actor-author-producer of both the theatrical and film worlds, will appear in his second photoplay for Artcraft Pictures, "Seven Keys to Baldpate." One of Mr. Cohan's greatest Broadway sensations, this play adapted from the book of the same name by Earl Derr Biggers, scored an emphatic hit all over the country several years ago. As a motion picture vehicle for the inimitable comedian, it offers an admirable subject in which to present to good advantage his funous mannerisms and at the same time, disclose particular adaptabilities to motion picture presentation.

Announced as a "mystery farce," this picture is confidently expected to amaze and thrill to a much greater extent than even the original play. Several distinct twists to the story, which tells of how an ardent author of hair-raising literature was a wagger to write a 1000-foot story in twenty-four hours, are evoked with startling result. Many humorous situations are presented in typical Cohan-ese style and a surprise climax, such as has never before been presented on the screen is suddenly displayed with telling effect.

Staged under the direction of Hugh Ford, whose many successes with the Famous Players trade-mark have placed him among the very foremost exponents of modern Broadway, the story is given a much greater scope on the screen than was possible on the stage. An exceptional opportunity is afforded to the popular Broadway star, as well as several members of the original cast of the play, including Anna Q. Nilvan, Mrs. E. Wolf Hoover, popularly known as Fida, Henry, Joseph Smiley, Russell Bassett, Frank Lasse, Corone Uzzell, G. Wayne Cook, Carlton Macy, Eric Hutton, Paul Everton, and Fernal Pratt. That the success of Mr. Cohan's second photoplay will greatly increase his following among film patrons already established as a result of "Broadway Jones," is assured. Entirely different from his first motion picture which met with such great public favor, "Seven Keys to Baldpate" will disclose to the cinema world a character which, although typical of his one and only type, is at the same time a revelation in Cohan accomplishments.

The railroad has filed a petition with the state Public Service Commission for permission to build a line across the tracks of the Northern Pacific.

Skin of the Devilfish.

The extraordinary shape, huge size, and vast power of the big devilfish, or manta, give him an evil reputation, which is heightened by his black coloring. A queer peculiarity of this coloring is that the black pigment comes off on anything touching it. Kneeling on one of the devilfish when it was drawn up on the sand I arose with my knee completely blackened. The skin is not only very tough, but is also very rough, being covered like that of an old shark with dermal denticles which scratch the skin if a naked arm or leg is drawn across it. The fin-roots are peculiarly toothless, entirely so as regards the upper fin, while the lower fin has a small dental plate which differs in the two sexes. In spite of its size the manta is in no way dangerous to man unless attacked, but when provoked its furious energy, tenacity of life and enormous strength render it formidable. For it can easily smash or overturn a boat which is clumsily handled, and if the ropes foul an accident is apt to occur.—Theodore Roosevelt in Scribner.

War Tanks.

War "tanks" were conceived many years ago, not in the moving towers of the pre-Christian era, but in more recent times. In 1814 a workman prepared a scheme to present to Napoleon, explaining how a vehicle could be constructed, to be drawn by horses, thoroughly protected, including the horses, and able to carry men and guns right up to the enemy's lines. The man was arrested as a lunatic. And did not Leonardo da Vinci declare that he could construct a safe and indestructible vehicle, carrying artillery, which could enter the ranks of the enemy and prepare the way for the infantry? Two of the great craftsman's pen drawings of "war machines" are included in the famous Alfred Morrison collection of autograph letters and papers.—London Chronicle.

FIFTY SURPRISES In the Latest Mitchells--See Them

No matter how well you know fine cars, scores of features will surprise you in the Mitchells, we believe. These are examples of the extra values which efficiency methods can give. And they are fine examples. All are produced complete—chassis and body—under John W. Bate, the efficiency expert. And in a model plant, where up-to-date methods have cut labor cost in two.

- WANTED EXTRAS
We have taken pains to learn what features men and women want. And they are all in the latest Mitchells.
- There are 21 features rarely found in cars. These include a power tire pump, dashboard engine primer, reversible headlights, etc.
- There are shock-absorbing springs, found on no other car. They make the Mitchell the easiest-riding car. In two years—since we adopted this feature—not a single spring has broken.
- There are surprising luxuries and beauties. In the past year we have added 25 per cent to the cost of finish, upholstery and trimming.
- There is heat-fixed finish which stays new. There is extra-grade leather which lasts. There is a light in the tonneau, a locked compartment, handles for entering, and countless dainty touches.
- There are all the attractions our experts found in 257 sharp models—all in a single year.
- DOUBLE STRENGTH
But the greatest Mitchell feature is the 100 per cent over-strength. In the past three years we have doubled our margins of safety.
- Safety parts are vastly over-size. Castings are almost eliminated. Over 440 parts are built of toughened steel. We spend $100,000 yearly on radical tests and inspections.
- The result is a lifetime car. Two Mitchells that we know have already been run over 200,000 miles each.
- 8 SMART STYLES
The Mitchell line now includes eight exclusive styles. All are designed by our experts, and built in our own body plant.
- They include open cars and closed cars, convertible cars and sport cars. All of them distinctive. They come in two sizes, at two basic prices. No other cars in the Mitchell class offer so many appeals.
