Fine, New Pipe Organ Will be Dedicated at The Arcade Theatre Monday Night

CHARLES H. STEVENS Organist Arcade Theatre.

mechanical instruments were used entirely and exhibitors soon recognized that the music was inappropriate and could not harmonize correctly with the action upon the screen. Orchestra in many cases were eliminated for similar reasons as the abrupt changes could not be followed intelligently.

The organ of the orchestral type was found to be the logical instrument which properly synchronized with the picture can interpret more correctly the emotion of the actors upon the screen.

Managers Meyers and Leiter of the Arcade Theatre upon close investigation in the organ field determined upon the organ manufactured by the American Photo Player company, known as the Wicks Beethoven No. 2, and the community is to be congratulated upon their magnificent aciection.

Future audiences of the Arcads will listen to music by the organist, Mr. Charles H. Stevens, which combines feeling, good taste and expression—music which is not overdone—nor intrudes or forces itself upon the audience but is conducted as an accompaniment to the pictures and is a suggestion to the thought and action of the silent drama.

The merchants in this and 400 other cities of North America have answered your question this week.

They have put the goods in the window and have told you why they have put them there.

The products they displayed were all newspaper advertised products.

They chose these because they know it pays storekeepers to co-operate with newspaper advertising.
