Letters From The Front

The following letter was received from members of Battery B, now at Charlotte, N. C.:

Charlotte, N. C., Oct. 9, 1917.—The La Grande Evening Observer, Mr. Leiter, Dear Sir: Having received many letters from our relatives and friends at home in which some one else always wanted to know how we were getting along, we thought it would probably be of interest to some of your readers to hear from Battery B, Oregon Field Artillery.

While at Clackamas we were all impatient to be on our way, so when the word finally came, we all were a happy crowd.

Our first stop was at Gazelle, Cal., where we stopped to water and feed our stock, in fact while the horses were some trouble to us they also were a means for us to visit most of the principal cities on the way.

We were treated fine by every one, and at Los Angeles, Tucson, Houston and New Orleans, most of the boys hired cars and went for drives and to see the various places of interest.

At El Paso the Red Cross ladies met us at the train and had a fine lunch ready for us.

We were twelve days and nights on the way and when we finally arrived at Charlotte were as glad to be at the end of our journey, as we were to leave Oregon.

The South, as a rule, is a very beautiful country, with much more timber and hills than we expected.

At the present time there are about 30,000 men at Camp Greene, but new companies are coming in every day. Almost all of these troops are from the Northwest, and they are quite a contrast to the home people here, who as a rule, are not near as healthy or robust looking set of men.

We are now drilling hard and expect before long to be in shape to do some good for Uncle Sam.

The boys are not used to being confined like they keep us; but do not mind the discipline like we thought we would before joining.

Charlotte is a very pretty place of 50,000 and they do not need Billy Sunday to lecture them, for they already have 68 white and 31 black churches, so you may be sure we are very well taken care of spiritually, and Uncle Sam is trying to mentally and physically.

We do not expect to spend the Winter here, but have no idea whether it will be at some other camp or France. Now with best regards to all, and hoping to be with you again some day, we are proud to sign our names behind Battery B, 147th Field Artillery.

Camp Lewis Notes

Camp Lewis, Tacoma, Wash., Oct. 19.—The Hee-Haw kindergarten will graduate 800 men this week.

Be it known that the Hee-Haw kindergarten is the school devoted to instruction in handling the American Army mule. Shoeing, harnessing, mule temperament and kick dodging are the subjects taught in the course.

Graduates are entitled to the degree S. B. H.—meaning, Skinned, by Heck.

The best cure for homesickness, the best joy-bringer is the home town paper. To cheer up your soldier friend, send him a copy of this paper.

If a six-foot German, armed with two revolvers, a rifle and a bomb and with a knife between his teeth should attack Jesse Cover, Dunkard, he would not raise a finger in defense. Although assigned to non-combatant duties, Cover is anxious to return to his little California ranch near Modesto.

Tons of candy, cake and fruit are consumed in Camp Lewis every week. An average of about 56,000 pieces of mail is now handled daily. Boxes of stuff from home are coming in carloads—and this great movement of mail and goodies is constantly increasing.

Eddie O'Connell and Walt Miller, middle weight wrestling champion, are matched to wrestle in Spokane the latter part of this month.

WASHINGTON PEA INDUSTRY THRIVING

Spokane, Wash., Oct. 19.—(Special.)—The growing importance of the pea industry is illustrated at Fairfield, Wash., where eastern seed concerns operating in the vicinity have already contracted for 25,000 acres of peas for next year.

The yield this year has averaged 15 to 20 bushels, about half of a normal yield. Even at the smaller figures, many growers say they can make a greater profit than in wheat raising.

"MADAME BO-PEEP" STARS SEENA OWEN

Seena Owen, Triangle star, appears in a production adapted from the story "Madame Bo-Peep of the Ranches," by O. Henry, at the Star Theatre Saturday only.

As the dainty heroine of the film play Miss Owen proves that she is a genuine heart breaking coquette and later as the proprietress of a sheep ranch in the wild and woolly west. She accomplishes the transition with perfect ease and seems as much at home in a saddle as in a drawing room divan. As a fighter Miss Owen shows that she can hold her own with the best of them. In a thrilling scene, in which she is seized by the foreman of the ranch, she makes her escape by "strong arm" methods from her assailant and gallops madly away on horseback. In this scene a chase ensues, and to evade her pursuers Miss Owen makes her mount swim across a lake.

She goaded the animal into the shallow water and expected him to swim the rest of the way. As the deeper water was reached the steed sank into the mud until he was unable to extricate himself and floundered helplessly. No one but Miss Owen realized the predicament she was in, but she resolved not to let the accident spoil the scene and struck out to swim to the other side of the lake without the horse. The camera man had the presence of mind to keep the camera focused on the swimming girl, and the photographic result was so unexpected and realistic the director decided to incorporate it in the picture without change.
