—We handle a very extensive stock of the Rubber Goods, Syringes, etc.

Quality is very important in these goods—far more important than the price. The goods we carry are, we think, as fine as are produced, while the prices are very reasonable—as low as any one can desire who wants good goods.

Stroller

I am thinking seriously about joining the Home Study club. A bachelor like me, with a small income, might learn a few things—besides they might serve samples of their cooking.

I strolled into the Elks Home yesterday afternoon and am pleased to be able to relate that several ladies looked up and smiled at me. Which makes life worth living.

A young lady asked me, "What makes that old maid so mad?" And I answered, "That old maid is mad because she hasn't got a man, and that married woman is still madder because she has."

Extract From My Diary—"Sunday, October 28: On this day, contrary to custom, the Chief of Police got beamed."

Maybe 1918 will not "see the end of the war," but $5,000,000,000 will get it a good deal closer to the point from which a view of the proceedings may be had.

White shoes look quite as large in the films as elsewhere.

Now that the British have captured Beersheba, they might as well capture Dan, too.

Hallowe'en Passes Quietly—The much dreaded (by the police) Hallowe'en passed by without a single disorderly act as far as could be ascertained. Not a gate was reported missing, few woodpiles were disturbed, nobody found their wagon on their neighbor's barn and everything in general was just about as it was the night before. The fact that no damage was done does not mean that the night elapsed by unobserved bands of children took delight in appearing before the unwary pedestrian in ghostly garb and Jack 'o' Lanterns were much in evidence.

Hallowe'en Party At "Y" Big Success

A large crowd, four big acts and a plentiful supply of pie and cider were the outstanding features at the Y. M. C. A. Hallowe'en party last night. The acts, which proved equal to any big time vaudeville show ever produced here, were put on in the gymnasium before a large and boisterously enthusiastic audience.

The program was led off by a selection by the Kazoo Band, an organization far superior to any other band of the city. In fact so great was their success that it is rumored that Sousa has abdicated in their favor. The personnel of the band was as follows: Gladys Black, director; Helen Simms, Jeanette Stoddard, Lois Givens, Stella Desilet, Irene O'Connell and Thelma Oesterling. The girls performed in dress suits.

The second stunt represented the reception of different foods into the stomach by the gastric juice and the final routing of gastric juice by a hot dog with disastrous results. The skit was under the direction of Helen Currey.

A shadow play was the next offering. The plot was given in a reading by Naomi Williamson and was enacted by shadows. The act was very clever.

The last act was a playlet given under the direction of Professor DuBois.

After the show the crowd returned to the club room and were treated to pie and cider. Numerous free attractions were on hand to keep the fun going.
