PRISON PRISONERS DECREASE
SALEM, Ore., Nov. 8.—Slowly, but surely, decreasing is the population of one Oregon community—the state prison. Only a couple of years ago—in the good old days of many saloons—the inmates of the prison averaged about 500. In October official figures show the prison population to be 341. Now it is several less. The following monthly figures show how steadily the prison's population is shrinking: February, 473; March, 417; April, 411; May, 389; June, 381; July, 378; August, 351; September, 345; October, 341. Read the Observer classified ads.
