STAR TODAY ONLY
"MASTER OF HIS HOME."

Sadie Light Moon, one of the few remaining Indians so-called at Hartsville, the Santa Monica Plant of the Triangle Film Corporation, proves herself a capable actress in "Master of His Home," the latest starring vehicle of William Desmond.

The aged Sioux squaw plays the role of Desmond's housekeeper in the little mountain cabin where he and his partner J. J. Dowling dwell in order to be close to their mines. In the scenes where some aristocratic visitors from the East are being shown through the mines, Desmond invites them to see his homely little cabin, and an elderly woman in the party spying the squaw, lifts her lorgnette to her eyes and exclaims, "A Savage!" This called for an expression from Sadie and a close up shows her expressing her indignation at the unkind remark of the aristocratic visitor.

Several times during the action of the story the squaw was called upon for some difficult acting by Director Walter Edwards, and she proved herself more than equal to the occasion in every instance.

The story is by R. Cecil Smith, and the supporting cast includes Alma Ruben, Robert McKim, J. J. Dowling and Eleanor Hancock.

This thrilling film will be shown at the Star for the last time tonight.

CHILD STAR AT THE STAR THEATRE SATURDAY ONLY.

"The screen is the world's greatest teacher," wrote a famous editor, "and the moving picture men have a responsibility to the public which leading newspapers have pointed out many times."

demonstrate the way in which the Pathe Company realizes this responsibility.

Maude Adams has never played anything but wholesome, clean parts. She has a bigger following than any actor or actress on the legitimate stage. The management of the Star knows that the great majority of the American people want clean photo-plays. They are presenting Baby Marie Osborne in "Toll at Twilight," probably the best yet of her pictures. Saturday only. It is a delightful story of tears, laughs and thrills, and proves that a photoplay can move quickly to a big climax and still remain an attraction for children as well as grown-ups.

LETTER FROM THE FRONT

Letter from Heber Conrad to his father, E. J. Conrad, of Summerville, S. C.—SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE, Oct. 9.—My Dear Father: It has been a long time since I have heard from you so I will write. Mother said in her last letter that you were going to write soon, but I have not received your letter. It is raining very hard today and did all night. The weather is just like it is there late in the fall, as it is so chilly and damp. I have a slight cold today but that is no more than natural this time of year. I wish I was there for a few days to go grouse hunting. How did the stock do in the hills this year? Talk about the pretty horses there. I wish you

An Old Man's Stomach.

As we grow older and less active, less and less food is required to meet the demands of our bodies. If too much is habitually taken, the stomach will rebel. When a man reaches the advanced age of 85 or 90, you will find that he is a light eater. Be as careful as you will, however, you will occasionally eat more than you should and will feel the need of Chamberlain's Tablets to correct the disorder. These tablets do not contain poison, but strengthen the stomach and enable it to perform its functions naturally. They also cause a gentle movement of the bowels. Adv.

ARCADE

GEORGE BEBAN IN "LOST IN TRANSIT" TODAY AND SAT.

In "Lost in Transit," George Behan's latest Paramount picture in which he will appear at the Arcade Theatre today and Saturday, a new actor, aged two and a half, and familiarly known as "Bob White," makes his screen debut in an important role, although he has starred a few scenes in two other pictures, the first of which was more or less of an accident. George Behan was working in "A Roadside Impresario" in which, it will be remembered, he danced with a trained bear to amuse a crowd of children. "Bob White" was watching Mr. Behan and the bear dancing, and they all seemed to be having such a very good time that it seemed a shame for a little chap just running over with fun to be left out.

So "Bob White" joyously cavorted in. He slipped and danced right in under the cameraman's astonished nose and before that gentleman or any one else had time to say Jack Rabbit—or "Bob White," he and Mr. Behan had joined hands and with Bruno, were having the time of their lives. So the cameraman kept on grinding and one of the pettiest, most spontaneous scenes of filmdom was registered forever on the long strip of celluloid. As long as "Bob White" had been in one scene they had to let him in for the others and he enjoyed it so much, and made such a hit that he was again used in Mr. Behan's next picture, "The Cook of Canyon Camp."

Then Kathryn Williams, who is a well-known screen star as well as an authoress and who had seen the youngster's performance from the "role lines" in the studio, wrote "Lost in Transit" with "Bob White" and George Behan in mind.

They worked through the entire production together, "Bob" appearing in nearly as many scenes as the star himself, and it would be difficult to decide which of the two enjoyed the preceding more. In "Bob White" it was just one of the strict rules of which was not to look at the "camera" as he called the grinding machine.

and Ledbetter were here to see some real horses. They work such horses as Ledbetter's and Dan McDonald's—that is they are geldings and mares, but of that size. One horse does the work of two there, that is, they load twice as much onto one. Those pictures that you often see in the Breeders' Gazette are sure correct as I have seen them for myself. Too bad the crops are so short this year. If those calves get fat enough to butcher kill them for meat this winter if you haven't sold them. Tom says cattle are not very high now as everybody is selling what they can on account of high priced feed. Well, I must close for this time as news is scarce, and you know what you always say in your letters about being carefull what I write. Tell Mrs. Grainer, Leo has moved and I have not heard from him.
