ARCADE

WELL-KNOWN ACTOR IN PICTURE AT ARCADE

When "Blooded Day" is celebrated at the Arcade theatre today by presentations of "The Doctor of the Moth" by Ruth Clifford and associate players, the occasion will serve to introduce Miss Clifford's new leading man, Monroe Salisbury, to the Bluebird series of photoplays. The announcement that Mr. Salisbury will be permanently associated with the Rupert Julian productions will lend attractiveness to the series, because of his fine attainments as an interpreter of dramatic expression.

He appeared in the first Lasky picture, "The Spooky Man," playing with Duane Yarnall, and also was the lead in "The Goose Girl," one of the first of Marguerite Clark's vehicles. One of Salisbury's most recent notable characterizations was that of Alessandro, leading role in the screen production of Helen Hunt Jackson's beautiful story, "Ramona." He also made a distinct success as Conrad La Grange in "The Eyes of the World" and subsequently played with George Beban.

CHARLES RAY IN INCE PRODUCTION

Charles Ray, one of the most versatile and popular of the younger stars, who will be seen at the Arcade on Friday and Saturday in the Paramount screen adaptation of Ridgwell Cullum's famous novel, "The Son of His Father," has never worked with any other producer than Thomas H. Ince. The latter is known as the producer of many famous pictures, including "The Wrath of the Gods," "The Italian," "The Conard" and "Civilization."

W. H. Vogel of Union was in town on business yesterday.

"THE TEN OF DIAMONDS" A Triangle Production, Featuring Dorothy Dalton, Proves to Be Unusually Entertaining

(Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald in Moving Picture World)

The reason why "The Ten of Diamonds," from a story by Albert Cowles, proves intensely entertaining, is principally because its presentation is psychologically correct. The chief feminine character in the story is not of the type that we might wish our daughters or sisters to emulate, yet as a stray bit of human driftwood we find Dorothy Dalton's portrayal of her very fascinating.

According to the story, a cabaret dancer of the roughest type takes the offer of a handsome stranger who comes to her as she is reading her fortune in cards with the proposal to take her away from her present life and make a lady of her. In his secluded country home after a drunken scene with the butler in the middle of the night she is tamed and shamed by her apparent benefactor into behaving herself and following out the plan which he has made for her.

When the task of making a lady of the girl has been accomplished, he takes her to the city and presents her to society. A speculator in women's hearts proposes to her, and it is at this point of the story that she discovers that the man she has believed to be her benefactor has been using her for a tool against this man, who he tells her is his bitterest enemy. He tells the girl that she must marry the man, whom she despises, as a fulfillment of his revenge. At the hour of her marriage she weakens in her purpose and uses apparent drunkenness as a foil to deceive and disgust the bridegroom. The story closes with the dispersal of the wedding guests and the acceptance by the man of the love of the woman he has attempted to wrong.

CAMP LEWIS HAS REAL GHOST

Sleepwalker Causes Riot in Big Cantonment

CAMP LEWIS, Tacoma, Wash., Nov. 22.—It was 2:30 a. m., cold and still. The camp was asleep. Suddenly a sentry yelled, his voice in a high pitch, "Halt, halt! Corporal of the guard. Ghost! Ghost!" A thousand soldiers rushed out of barracks nearby. The ghost, white-clothed and unsteady in his gait, strolled up a company street. The sentry raised his gun to shoot, but dropped it at an officer's order. The ghost approached. Not a man moved. The crowd yelled its relief for the ghost was a soldier, wearing a flimsy pair of white pajamas, walking in his sleep.
