

PERUNA
Household
Helper

Peruna eases the burden of the housekeeper by keeping away the danger of illness resulting from colds, coughs, and indigestion due to catarrhal condition. It speedily relieves and overcomes these.

Its tonic properties build up the strength of the physically weak and run down, and its use is consequently especially after colds, is remarkably beneficial.

KEEP IT ON HAND

The wise housekeeper has Peruna on hand for instant use even if catarrhal troubles do not call for its regular administration. A dose or two in these often prevents a long illness.

Liquid or tablet form.

Manning Tablets are a splendid laxative for home use.

Had the Grip Three Weeks.

With January comes grippe. Lingering colds seem to settle in the system, causing one to ache all over feel feverish and chilly, tired, heavy and drooping. Mrs. Lizette Tylon, Henderson, Ky., writes: "My daughter had grippe for three weeks. I had the doctor and bought medicine and none of it did any good. I gave her Foley's Honey and Tar and now she is all right. I have told all my friends about it." Insist on the genuine Foley's Honey and Tar. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

PARISIAN IDOL SEEKS CONVENT

Actress Tires of Vanities Amid War's Horrors.

IS CONVERTED BY PRIEST

Eva Lavalliere, Late Star of the Varieties, Turns Over Her Wealth to the Poor—Found Shallowness of Stage Contrasted Too Strongly With Boundless Sufferings of the Soldiers in the Trenches.

Paris rubbed its eyes and sat up with a shock when it read in the morning papers recently that Eva Lavalliere was about to give up the world and retire to a convent. Lavalliere, who for almost twenty years has been the joy of Paris theatergoers; she whose voice and sparkling wit made of her one of the most popular actresses of the capital—whose special talent always gave you the feeling of biting into a sour-sweet apple with its particular and delightful tang.

Rumor has it that Lavalliere—like her famous namesake—tiring of the pomp and vanities of the world, has decided to seek peace and solace behind the walls of a cloister. At all events, the late star of the Varieties said when asked if the report was true:

Made Vow to Quit.

"When the war began I made a vow that I would never act again. Then managers begged me to change my mind, and I consented. I played a short season of 'Carmenita,' but the shallowness and artificialities of the stage contrasted with the boundless sufferings of our soldiers in the trenches sickened me and I gave up the part.

"Last spring I went into the country for a rest, and there one day the village priest called upon me and asked me whether I would not come to mass the following Sunday. I smiled—can you imagine me at mass—but he was such a delightful priest, and to please him I went. I returned again and again—and now I have decided to give up the rest of my life to religion."

Lavalliere looks strange without her makeup. She no longer hides the fact that her hair is white. She has given up her handsome apartment, sold her furniture, her furs and her jewels, turned the proceeds over to the poor, and has declared herself ready for her new vocation.

Some skeptical persons insist that the reason for this change of heart is that the actress feels her powers are waning and that she has lost her looks. Some even declare that all this is only the prelude to the announcement that she is to appear in a new play this season.

The Soldier Understands.

But the soldier in the trenches understands. Through three years of war, side by side with death, he has learned to look into men's hearts. By his own descent into the darkness of his fate he has discovered the shining brightness of spiritual life. He seems to have grown antennae with which he can probe into the mysteries of a soul. He is not satisfied that a woman, finding her existence an empty one, has gone bodily forth into the great adventure of discovering a new and finer life.

With the disappearance of Eva Lavalliere from the world's stage it seems as if a part of Paris had put on mourning for the dead in sympathy for the living, as if she had understood the terrible lesson of today and had decided to expiate, to pay with her devotion the fearful price of blood.

FLY AMERICAN FLAG BEHIND THE LINES

American Pluck Provides Government With Precious Metal Required for Making Explosives—Express Companies Refuse Job.

San Francisco, — A fortune, for which kings of crookdom would have cheerfully risked their necks, has just been delivered to the government, after having been carried half way around the world like so much junk.

Shrew Yankee pluck turned the trick.

It was transported from the Ural mountains, in Russia, to the United States by F. W. Draper, an American mining engineer, who turned 21,000 ounces over to the department of commerce.

The rare metal was carried in boxes, as Draper's luggage—a klug's ransom at the mercy of every porter, baggage-man and longshoreman in Russia and Japan.

He did the incredible.

"I got it safely through," explained the engineer, "because I did the incredible. No one would believe a man had so little sense as to lug a few million around like that. To have treated those boxes as precious would have meant to lose them—and probably my life as well.

"It was just an interesting bit of practical psychology."

His wife and four-year-old son accompanied him.

On the railroads across lawless Russia and Siberia, under the nose of the irresponsible bolshevik, and past thousands who would have cracked his head for a fraction of that wealth, Draper smuggled the precious dust.

Express companies had refused to take the risk at any premium.

"You'll never get it out of the country," they said. "Not with platinum worth almost its weight in diamonds."

"Well, there it is," he said, kicking some old boxes on the San Francisco pier.

"I've slept and eaten on those boxes for over a month. And when I wasn't sitting on 'em, my wife was. I've believed them to be the most precious things in the world."

The banner of the Virgin Mary, borne by Joan of Arc in her campaigns in defense of the dauphin, was the first white flag in French history.
