PRIORITIES IN FINANCING

The last annual report of Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo contains the following:

"The government must, if necessary, absorb the supply of new capital available for investment in the United States during the period of the war. This, in turn, makes it essential that unnecessary capital expenditures should be avoided in public and private enterprises. Some form of regulation of new capital expenditures should be provided."

In fixing the dates and amounts of the Liberty Loan issues the Secretary of the Treasury considers not only the needs of the government, but takes into careful consideration the business of the country and the financial needs of the country's business.

While no specific authority has been conferred by law upon him to pass upon new undertakings involving large expenditures of capital, labor or material, the secretary states that banks, corporations, municipal and state officials have submitted to him plans for new enterprises or issues of securities and that it is apparent that the United States government may count upon a full measure of cooperation on the part of states, municipalities and private business, so that no issue of state or other securities will interfere or unduly compete with the Liberty Loan issue.

The secretary has requested the Federal Reserve Board to pass upon such proposals as may be submitted to him and advise whether such expenditures of capital requiring the use of labor and material and such issues of new securities should be undertaken. Material and labor as well as capital are involved and both public improvements and new private enterprises, entirely proper and commendable in time of peace, will, in a great measure, now be considered in the light of and in connection with the governmental problems of finance and other military necessities.

The secretary urges that before making contracts requiring the use of labor and material and before placing new issues of securities or agreeing to purchase new issues of securities the Federal Reserve Board be conferred with.
The co-operation and co-ordination of state, municipal and private business with the business of the national government are important to the success of all and the winning of the war.

SUCCESS TO MR. SCIBIRD

George Scibird, editor of the Union Republican, has bought the Union Scout. He is an able man, genial, enterprising and is ably filling the field as an editor. The people of Union should support him liberally. They should subscribe to his paper and pay for it in advance; so should the people of the surrounding country. And

U. S. PICKS HER PHOTO FROM 22,000

(Drawn from photograph copyrighted by Underwood & Underwood)

Out of 22,000 photographs of beautiful girls submitted to the war department for a war insurance poster, that of Miss Frances Jordan, member of the "Jack O'Lantern" company, was chosen. The telegram Frances got, said: "Your photograph selected as the one portraying the characteristics most likely to inspire our soldiers and sailors."

in passing it should be remarked that one paper is enough for Union. The town will not support two. The more liberal the support given Mr. Scibird the better paper the people will get; and he it also remembered that every one will get more than value received. The money paid to a newspaper for advertising or job work is not charity.

NOT A SLACKER

Floyd Maxwell, editor of the Union Scout, has sold his paper to Mr. George Scibird and is going to enter the ordinance department of the University of Oregon. Mr.
Maxwell is one of the youngest country editors in the state. He believes that he can do more good for his country by entering the war game than he can by staying at home and running a country newspaper. No doubt Mr. Maxwell is right. At any rate, he is no slacker and is entitled to all the credit that a patriotic young man should get.

"Saving and thrift must increasingly be recognized as the fundamental basis for winning a long war," says Frank A. Vanderlip distinguished banker and chairman of the National War Savings committee. Without the elimination of waste we shall not be able to give our men at the front the support they need. From now on, month in and month out, our motto should be, "service through thrift."

COMMENT OF THE PRESS

Sincere and Constructive

Senator Chamberlain's criticism was a sincere and constructive one, and that part of the nation that casts aside all political prejudices and views the affair without a political or sectional bias regrets the strong words the President used in his rebuke.—Hood River Glacier.

A Serious Abuse

There is another abuse which Congress will be obliged to notice at an early date, and that is the vast amount of useless advertising which passes through the mails in the form of unsolicited letters and circulars. Nine-tenths of it goes into the waste basket. Its use was well enough, perhaps, in times of peace. It now clogs the postoffice and mail cars. The legitimate newspaper is the best advertising medium, and it is of greatest value when in its normal form.—Pendleton Evening Tribune.
