Woman Makes False Faces For The Disfigured

where the nose has been shot away, however—and there are many like that—the man's normal nose will be reproduced exactly as it was before and there will be perforations through the nostrils for him to breathe.

"I am going to make all of the masks with the lips slightly apart. This will obviate the grotesqueness of hearing a man speak through closed lips and will also permit a 'mutille' to smoke while wearing his mask. Further it will give a more cheerful aspect, as though the man was smiling.

"Capt. Derwent Wood, an English sculptor, originated the idea of making these artificial faces for men whose appearance would be so ghastly that they could not get work or even appear on the street because of their frightful wounds. He has been making masks for more than two years and has achieved some wonderful results.

"He always makes masks with the mouth shut, however, and at first did not pay enough attention to the painting of the artificial faces after they were made in copper. As a result the men had such pink-and-white complexions that the unreality of their countenances became apparent.

Even to Complexions.
"But by studying the matter closely and experimenting continually, Capt. Derwent Wood has reproduced complexions entirely, getting the dark, swarthy tint in the faces of the men with heavy beards and reproducing moles and lines on the skin.

"It must be understood that we do not make artificial faces for mutilated soldiers, but that we sculpt masks absolutely reproducing the countenances of these disfigured men as they were before being wounded.

"No American soldiers have yet been terribly wounded like that, so nothing of the kind has been started in the United States. But I am connected with the department for the mutilated of the American Red Cross, and eventually, when our men go into the trenches, I shall be ready to do what I can for any of the poor fellows who may be wounded in the face.

"The masks may be used temporarily or permanently. There are many patients waiting to receive the attentions of Doctor Morestin, the great French surgeon, and of Doctor Coulomb, the wonderful French oculist, who have done so much in restoring countenances. Dr. Joseph Blake earned a wonderful reputation in facial reconstruction during the early part of the war, but he has been so busy on other forms of surgery recently that he has been unable to give much time to it.

Too Terrible to Be Seen.
"Some of the French 'mutilles' may have to wait two or three years before they can begin their treatment under Doctor Morestin, and without one of these artificial faces they can only go out at night, as their wounds are too terrible for them to appear in public places—on the streets, in the underground railways, in motion picture theaters and in cafes. And, of course, they cannot find employment because of their ghastly appearance. Many of these cases cannot be treated successfully by surgery, and they will use the artificial faces permanently."

Mrs. Maynard Ladd arrived in Paris from America only a few weeks ago, and lost no time in getting to work on her new plan. She lived in Rome for some time before the war, and has been in Paris several times since hostilities broke out. She has done many heads and busts for well-known people in Italy, France and the United States. In 1907 she did a bronze entitled "The Soldier," of which General Pershing was the model. It depicted a United States army officer standing at rest. She has also done some Tanagra figures which have been favorably commented upon by leading critics.

A Bilious Attack

When you have a bilious attack your liver fails to perform its functions. You become constipated. The food you eat ferments in your stomach instead of digesting. This inflames the stomach and causes nausea, vomiting and a terrible headache. Take Chamberlain's Tablets. They will tone up your liver, clean out your stomach and you will soon be as well as ever. They only cost a quarter.—Adv.

OLD SOL TO BE TOTALLY ECLIPSED

On June 8 Next a Path of Darkness Will Extend Entirely Across the United States About Midday

Headlights burning at midday in order to light up the darkness that will come with a total eclipse of the sun. This is what is to happen on the Union Pacific system on June 8 next. The Union Pacific will have practically a monopoly on the eclipse, the path of totality following its lines across Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, Idaho, Oregon and Washington.

The need for turning on the headlights is no joke. The moon is the cause of it all. On that date Luna becomes looney and steps directly in front of old Sol, shutting out the light almost as completely as if an incandescent globe had had its current switched off.

Among the peaks that tower around Denver and in Rocky Mountain national park; in the canyons near Ogden and Salt Lake City, where you see the Devil's Slide; through the dense forests and mountain defiles on the way to Yellowstone park, and down the Columbia river gorge, where you see Malmomah falls, Mount Hood, and the famous Columbia river highway, the darkness will be more real than out on the plains.

Scientists, near-scientists and just curious will make the trip and they will be given a regular little eclipse, too. The west always does these things better than other folks.

Quite some time will be consumed in getting the moon directly in front of the "bos" and it will take a little while to get her away again, but she will "hesitate," that is, she will demonstrate once more, to old Sol, that he is not the whole thing and shut him out "totally" for nearly two minutes. That is the time the lights will have to be turned on, if during those two minutes the busy hands of the mothers, sisters and sweethearts are to continue with sweaters and mufflers, and the Union Pacific trains are to glide into the canyons and out again with their usual and time-honored safety.

Someone at this point is no doubt wondering what the soldiers in the trenches will think of the eclipse. Well, they aren't in on it. This is an American eclipse.

The thing astronomers will be looking for most intently is what they call the corona. The corona is a ring of light that completely surrounds the sun and by some is called a halo, the sun being the only thing in all the universe that has a real honest-to-goodness halo. Many men have been reputed to wear halos and many others think they do, but the sun is the only thing that can prove it, and oddly enough it is his better half, the moon, that comes along about every quarter century and pulls off a total eclipse in order to make the old world sit up and take notice of this halo which old Sol wears. Usually a total eclipse is to be seen only in the far-away places of the world, the South Sea islands or China, and never before has the path of totality been laid out over a course that takes in a big telescope like that at Denver, Colorado.

Well known points on the Union Pacific system which are getting ready are: Pocatello, Idaho; Baker, La Grande, The Dalles and Heppner, Oregon; Chehalis and Hoquiam, Washington. Portland will witness a 99 per cent eclipse and Seattle, 98 per cent.

It is up in the mountains and on the high plateaus, however, where the eclipse will be best observed because of the cloudless skies, the rarified air and the absence of dust and smoke, which interfere in the lower altitudes. For this reason, it seems certain that more scientists will travel over the lines of the Union Pacific system early next June than have visited the western country for many years.
