Eulogy Delivered on A. D. McAlister

At the funeral of Daniel Allison McAlister, at the Elks' Temple, the following eulogy was delivered by Col. F. S. Ivanhoe:

Exalted Ruler, Brother Elks, Ladies and Gentlemen, and sorrowing Relatives and Friends:

Not only in response to the ritualistic duty imposed upon the order, to pronounce on all occasions like this, a fitting eulogy upon the life and character of a departed brother, but in keeping with a solemn promise induced by the personal request of our lamented brother, D. A. McAlister, I pay this tribute to the memory of not only a brother Elk, but a most valued and warm personal friend as well.

Daniel Allison McAlister, was born in Coles county, Ill., on the 6th day of February, 1842, at that time near the extreme frontier of the civilized settlements of the United States. Here, by the persistent and close application so characteristic of his whole life, he acquired a good common school education, by attending school in the winter months but aiding with the farm during the summer time. When twenty years old he visited an uncle in Putnam county, Mo., and found him preparing to move to the Pacific coast. All who had the pleasure of knowing Bud McAlister, know what his course would be upon an invitation to share the adventures and hardships incident to a trip across the plains in the early days, and will not be surprised to know he was one of the train, having charge of the loose stock, making the entire trip horseback without the loss of a single animal. Like most expeditions of that time, coming west of the Rocky Mountains, the Willamette valley was the objective point in the minds of this band of pioneers. But they were destined, by following the usual route to the Willamette, to pass through this beautiful and fertile valley. To one from the prairies of Illinois, the combination of mountain and valley, forest and plain, revealed by the Grande Ronde country, would appeal with peculiar force. It only required a short sojourn to cause a permanent halt of the entire train, and the permanent and final location of young McAlister near the margin of the mountain stream winding its crooked way across the valley. As families located in the vicinity, the educational needs appealed to the early settler with its potent and progressive force, and young McAlister taught several terms of school. He became a recognized factor in the early development of mental, material and moral advancement in the community. By energy and application, he soon acquired a fixed place in the private, public and simple life of this section of the state. He had his ideals, and with the resources at hand, wrought accordingly. His standard, was never lowered. In his agricultural and stock-raising pursuits, he was true to the requirements and possibilities of his surroundings. Within his means and capacity, he opened up to profitable and practical use, his home place. He engaged in raising stock, principally horses for driving and traveling purposes, and his success and achievements are known to all. He fixed a standard that has not been met or passed along this line. He did not belong to that class of sportsmen who, by the unfair methods known to the professional jockey, too often brand the legitimate stock breeder with the suspicion of a race-track gambler. With him it was a test based upon merit and merit alone and his unshaken integrity made him popular with all classes. Like all pioneers, he built himself a home in the country of his adoption. In November, 1867, he married Nancy J. Moo. They were the parents of ten children, and their married life covered a period of nearly half a century, all in this county and valley. Mrs. McAlister died the 27th of January, 1914, and there is now surviving this couple, six living children, Frank A., of North Powder, Mary A. Moss, of La Grande, Charles C., residing at Silverton, Oregon, William D., Arthur and Rees, of La Grande. Many other relatives survive the deceased. Mrs. Para Thornton and her sister Mrs. Mary Worth, Mrs. Kate Harrison, a half sister, and Mr. Nolan Skiff, a nephew, all residing and well known in this city.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid liver.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No gripping is the " keynote " of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth," new and then—a bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver and are constipated, you'll find quick, sure and only pleasant results from one or two little Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take one or two every night just to keep right. Try them. 10c per 25c per box. All druggists.

But the activities of D. A. McAlister were not confined to the material development of Union county's possibilities and resources. He held a broad and patriotic view of public affairs, and had a generous grasp upon the political and public confidence, which he never abused. After succeeding in his business life, he was induced to share with the public, his constructive business ability. With little or no apparent pretensions, there was not a public question, affecting the real interests of progressive development in this state, or even within the welfare of the whole country, that he did not substantially comprehend, and that he did not give his best judgment and support. The integrity he practiced in his private life, was his rule of action in public life. Duty was his religion, and fidelity to a public or private trust, his mode of worship. He did not proclaim from the housetop "Be hold me, an honest man." In the most unassuming course, he lived up to his standards, and practiced what he preached. His life was an open book and every page was so clear and clear, that with conscientious political convictions making him a member of the minority party, his real and known character was such that without political jockeying, he always led in the race. Twice he represented this and Wallowa counties in the state senate, and once in the house of representatives. His election to these responsible positions, covered a portion of a past epoch of the political life of this state, the period when U. S. senators were elected, or too often, bought their way to a seat in the national congress. Many men serving in state legislatures during this period returned with such questionable records that explanations would not explain; but Bud McAlister never had to apologize for his action on any measure, or his vote for U. S. Senator. He simply let the record take care of itself, and it always did. No position or temptation could swerve him from the direct path of what he deemed his plain duty. He made no speeches, but his influence was that of the genial sunshine that ripens into the fruit of good results, the prolific seed of good principles.

A Union county bard once sang: "The upward stride of the sinner, is better than wall of saint. The creed of the world on banner unfurled, in action, not complaint." No man, in daily contact with others, was freer from complaint and criticism of others, and gave credit where it was due, than brother Bud McAlister. In the charity of his manhood, he measured the character of men and policies by the good he found in them, not by defects and frailties. The faults of his brothers he wrote upon the sand—their virtues upon the tablets of love and memory. The imperfections of his fellow men he treated with the charity of his silence. No evil report escaped his lips concerning the weakness, shortcomings or conduct of others. He liked the man who acted honestly upon his convictions. He rejoiced in his success, and regretted his failure. In the storms of life he was oak, and in the sunshine he was the vine and flower. He had the strength of purpose and the resolution that command universal respect and confidence, and with this, all the tender humanities that made him loved by all who knew him well. He was a type of that class of men who leave behind them actual achievements. By instinct and experience, he was the highest ideal of the pioneer. The man who blazes trails. The man who puts the plow to the virgin sod, and causes the desert to bloom like the rose. The man who makes for himself and those of his household a home in the wilderness. A man capable of adopting the good, and with charity for others, eschewing the bad. A man who lived the simple, useful and manly life, keeping step with material, moral and political development, fulfilling the mission and leaving the message of a career his people and all who knew him are
