BOHEMIAN CAFE IN "REVELATION"

sphere of a gay Parisian cafe to the Metro studio.

The jolly "frequenters" drank and smoked at scores of tables in care-free revelry, while waiters scurried about dispensing drinks. At the bar, in the rear, were gathered Apaches and other denizens of the unconventional Latin quarter.

Alla Nazimova was born in the Russian Crimea, in a little town on the shores of the Black Sea. It early became evident that she had talent of an unusual order, but at first she studied the violin, even going to Geneva, Switzerland, to continue her studies, preparing for a career as child prodigy. It was at Odessa, Russia, that she disco-

NEW TYPES OF COMEDY IN "SON OF DEMOCRACY"

Benjamin Chapin Finds Best Humor Of All Is In Showing People As They Are—Not In Caricature.

That people as they really are furnish better comedy than caricatures is proved by Benjamin Chapin in "The Son of Democracy," the new Paramount series, which will begin at the Arcade Theater today, and tomorrow.

"The Son of Democracy" is a series of ten half-hour stories, each complete in itself. One story is to be shown each week.

A new sort of comedy, clean, gentle and based on an intimate knowledge of the queer quirks in human nature, is the sort Mr. Chapin has put in "The Son of Democracy." He has found that people as they really are furnish good laughs. Their inconsistencies, their poses, their misunderstandings presented in a motion picture bring to mind familiar scenes and the spectator says, "That's just like that" or "I don't see that thing myself" or "Isn't that real human nature?" and laughs good humoredly.

The leading character in "The Son of Democracy" is Abraham Lincoln. Lincoln was feared for his humor and Mr. Chapin makes his audiences laugh with Lincoln, and weep with Lincoln, too, for there's pathos as well as comedy in these little dramas. Mr. Chapin has taken the most dramatic of Lincoln stories and has put them on the screen—stories of boyhood pranks and stories of manhood victories—making a thoroughly inspiring series of dramas.

The first story shows "Abe," the boy, his birth in a log hut, his struggles to learn to read and write and his battles with other boys. The influence of Nancy Hanks, Lincoln's mother, puts the boy on the path to great things.

On her death bed, "Abe" promises her always to be honest, gentle and kind and never to fight again. In later years, when he is called upon to decide war, the memory of this promise returns to him and he faces the biggest problem of his life.

Every Woman wants to be Pretty, Healthful and Shapely

When a young girl puts on her first corset her figure has a tendency to grow into the line of her corsets whether the lines are good or bad. If her first corset is a bad one and she obtains a bad figure from it, of course a new corset of the same model will fit her better than any corset of superior lines or design, for has she not allowed her figure to take the imperfect lines of the poor corset?

RED CROSS News and Notes

TO ALL PATRIOTIC CITIZENS:

The La Grande Chapter of the Red Cross is compelled to make another appeal to the patriotic citizens of this community. The funds of the Chapter are inadequate to the demands made upon it for the purchase of material and supplies which it is supposed to furnish.

At the present time the chapter finds itself in debt about $1,000, having expended since April 16, 1917, to April 1, 1918, $24,347.38. Their indebtedness at this time in excess of their assets is $1,017.59.

In order to hold the chapter's charter and continue the good work which is now more necessary and essential than ever before in the history of the war, the chapter has found that it will have to receive a regular monthly income amounting to from one or two thousand dollars, and to this end we appeal to you to fill out the attached subscription blank for as much as you can spare monthly for this very essential work.

La Grande, Oregon, 1918
I hereby agree to pay to La Grande Chapter of the Red Cross the sum of $..... payable on the first day of each month.

GOD ALMIGHTY ALONE COULD TAKE STARS OUT OF FLAG

This was but one American invention. Yet another was the aeroplane, "the eyes of the army and navy," which today were all important. All knew that the aeroplane was an American invention and one perfected on American soil. Turning to the exploit which had prompted these reflections, he referred to the British effort of a few days ago to block the channels of the submarine harbors at Ostend and Zeebrugge, and said that all who recalled Captain Hobson's exploit at Santiago would recognize that the British had repeated an American experiment. He did not yet know with what measure of success, but he thought it would probably check at least for a time the operations of the U-boats. Finally he urged the drafted men to bear in mind that there was absolutely no reflection cast upon them by being drafted. On the contrary, they had been selected by the board as being the finest specimens of America's physical manhood and best fitted to undertake the most strenuous work in the battle field. They would do their duty he was sure, and after they had hoisted the Stars and Stripes in Unter-den-Linden, they would return to the United States, the heroes, not of a day, but for all time. Mr. Cochran then presented each honor guest with tiny silken flags of all the nations which are allied on the battlefield of France against German autocracy and made a fitting allusion to each flag.

Simpson's Oratory Most Impressive. In introducing L. J. Simpson of North Bend, who is one of the favorite candidates for governor, Toastmaster Coolidge said that La Grande was very fortunate in having in her midst at this time one of the great men of Oregon, who had kindly consented to speak.

L. J. ("Louie") Simpson, who was received with applause, opened his address with an extremely humorous story and after the laughter had subsided, settled down to an outline of America's part in the great war and some of the reasons why every true American must give his and her undivided support to the nation. He stated that Germany had, in practically all her dealings with the United States in the first three years of the war played false to the country to which she professed friendship. Nothing had been regarded as sacred if it obstructed the realization of the German dream of world control. Treaties containing the most solemn pledges were ruthlessly destroyed; in fact, Germany had forfeited any right she ever possessed to be taken at her word. Here in America, while German government officials were overwhelming us with their professions of brotherly love and friendship, their agents were at work within our borders, spreading sedition and plotting the destruction of our public institutions and private property.

"God Almighty Alone Could Take Three Stars Out Of The Flag." Amidst a silence that could be felt, Simpson recalled the Zimmerman incident. He asked, in all seriousness what we, as Americans, were to think of a government which, at the very moment that it had given us every assurance that it would do all in its power to maintain friendly relations with us, was deliberately plotting with Mexico, to persuade Japan to attack us and crush the United States so that she might be put entirely out of reckoning as a possible enemy of Germany. And the price Zimmerman had offered to pay Mexico was the three southern states of Arizona, Texas and New Mexico. Think of it, said Mr. Simpson, think of the unbounded audacity of the proposal. But Zimmerman had overlooked one factor. "There is no power on earth, no power on the sea, no power under the sea, no power over the sea, no power in this great world of ours—except God Almighty—that could take three stars out of the flag. (Applause.)

Oregon's Great Work.

Mr. Simpson then turned to the wonderful patriotism that had been displayed by Oregonians, the state which had been first in nearly everything that had stood for right in the battle of democracy versus autocracy. Was it enlistments, Liberty loans, Red Cross funds or any other demand for assistance in furthering American interests in the war, Oregonians had always been the first to respond and they would continue to respond, aye, if need be, to the last man and the last dollar, in order that the Stars and Stripes and all that it stands for shall prevail.

Bids Boys To Be Of Good Cheer.

Turning to the men who are leaving tonight for their training camps, he urged them to go to their new posts with light hearts and full of confidence that those they had left behind would never neglect their own duty, to see that they are always provided with the best that America can offer. And when they returned, we who had watched their progress on the battlefield because we were not able to be with them, would willingly surrender the best in the land for the men who had made our homes and the future of our children and country safe.

Several minutes elapsed before round after round of applause which followed the last sentence of Mr. Simpson's speech had subsided, so great was the impression created by his fine oratory.

Judge John S. Coke, another Coos Bay man, in a brief address, extended to the boys some good advice and wished them every success "over there."

Dr. M. K. Hall naturally centered the theme of his talk on the wonderful work of the Red Cross and the reasons why it deserved the full support of all Americans.

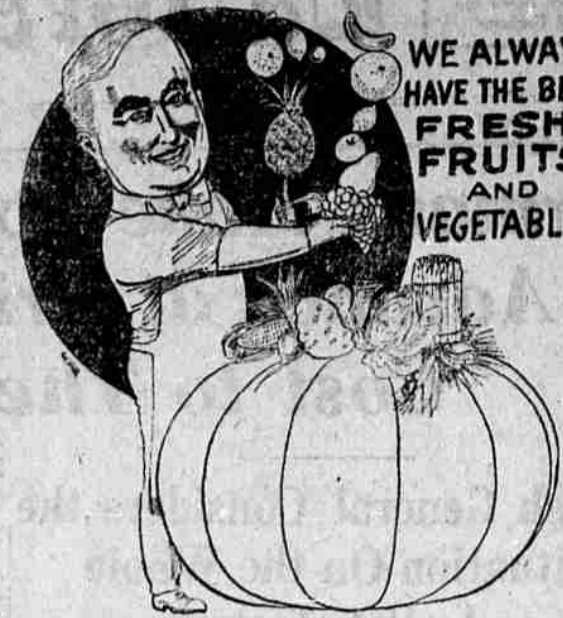

W. M. Pierce delivered a most impressive address on the historical aspect of the war and the absolute need for an unqualified victory for America. His speech was listened to with marked attention, and he was applauded when he turned to the toastmaster and thanked him for the opportunity which had been extended to him to address the departing boys.

H. S. Brownton, in a few well-chosen words, on behalf of all present, wished the boys God-speed and a safe return, a wish that found a ready response in the hearts of all, whether parents, sweethearts, wives, friends or acquaintances.

After an address of Clark Leiter, who was warmly welcomed back to La Grande, on the work of the Council of Defense, and a daintily-rendered vocal solo by Mrs. J. J. Carr, who was in beautiful voice, Mrs. C. N. Palmer, president of Army and Navy Auxiliary, presented each one of the drafted men with a sweater, ditty bag and other articles which will be admirably adapted to their requirements in their new vocations as soldiers.

Before the evening's function came to an end with the singing of the national anthem, each of the honor guests was called upon for
