SHERRY'S

ROBERT JOSEPH CONNELLY MAKES OFF WITH HONORS IN "THE SUSPECT"

Small But Important Member of Vitagraph Stock Co. Makes a Hit.

Bobby Connelly, the wonderful child actor, plays what is considered his best part in the new Vitagraph Blue Ribbon, "The Suspect." In one scene Bobby is torn from his mother by the officers of the law and in childish terror he clings to her skirts and sobs. The tears flow down his cheeks and if he had been made-up at the time the production was filmed his cheeks would have registered as through streaked with mud.

He grows so absorbed in his part that he rushes to the door after his mother has gone and attempts to pull it open, resting his little knee up against the knob and pulling with all his force.

When the scene was filmed in the studios Bobby was told what to do in his part—the lights were turned on, the cameraman began to turn his crank and Bobby stepped into the picture. Before long everybody in the cast was sobbing with him. When the picture had been taken the players could be seen all around, brushing real salt tears from their eyes and so worked up was Anita Stewart, who was playing the part of the mother, that she was unable to remain any longer that afternoon.

Although Bobby has done wonderful things for the sake of the pictures, this is, by far, way ahead of them all and stands apart from the general routine acting which has become a second nature to the little fellow. And don't forget that today is the last showing of "Vengeance and The Woman" and Blake and Bessie will be a memory only and the management of Sherrys is assured that the memory will be a pleasant one.

Attempt to Balk Lovers Fails

Margaret Worth and Howard Skeele, daughter and son of George Worth and Richard Skeele, respectively, have successfully defied and outwitted their wealthy parents, who attempted to force them into a marriage with each other. Today Howard Skeele is in Washington with his newly-wedded wife, formerly Miss Alice Stevens, whom he met only yesterday for the first time.

The parents of Miss Worth and Mr. Skeele had made arrangements to have their children marry. Finding the children obstinate, they locked them up in adjoining rooms of a New York hotel and told them very plainly that they would obtain their freedom only on condition that they would wed. Furthermore, Howard was threatened with disinheritance if he did not consent to wed by six o'clock that same evening. His door was then locked on him from the outside. Howard climbed out of the window of his room and crawled along a protruding ledge into an apartment which appeared to be unoccupied. As he was about to leave the room, he heard a noise and jumped into a bathroom adjoining. Baron von Wiederholtz entered, and Howard heard him making preparations to leave the country. Just at this time Miss Alice Stevens arrived at the hotel in quest of plans which Baron Wiederholtz had stolen from her father, an inventor, under instructions from the German government. Miss Stevens entered the Baron's room by means of a pass key, was caught by the Baron, seized, and threatened with death and dishonor; but Howard floored the Baron with a blow and brought about the latter's arrest. To avoid losing his inheritance, Howard married Miss Stevens five minutes before six and announced the fact to his father. Both Howard and his wife are now in Washington and their parents are somewhat dazed.

This is an outline of the interesting story in "From Two to Six," Triangle's photoplay, which will be shown at the Star Theatre Thursday and Friday.

ARCADE

Salisbury in "Red, Red Heart"

Three big automobiles carrying the Monroe Salisbury-Ruth Clifford Bluebird company to location from Hesperia, Cal., sank in the soft mud of a stream one day near the little town of Victorville, about a dozen miles distant from their point of departure, and ten miles away from location. Every effort was made by Director Wilfred Lucas and his corps of assistants to move the machines, but without avail. The director had a number of important scenes to make for "The Red, Red Heart," and under the circumstances all thoughts of reaching the location had to be abandoned.

"We'll change the script and make the scenes right here," decisively announced Lucas.

An assistant was sent back to Hesperia for help, while he proceeded with the work of production, making the place fit into the story. By the time the necessary aid had arrived from Hesperia the fast-working producer had made twenty-eight scenes. And then instead of moving on to their original destination, the company made use of the immediate vicinity which furnished a wonderfully picturesque background for the scenes, two dozen more of which were taken before Director Lucas called it a day and the players returned to their headquarters at Hesperia. These accidental scenes are among the most striking in Honor Willis's desert picture, which will be seen at the Arcade Theatre tomorrow only.
