SHERRY'S

Last Showing of the Cowboy King. One of the big events of the season in moving pictures took place yesterday at the Sherry theatre, where William Fox's new production, "Cupid's Roundup," was seen for the first time. A great deal of interest was thrown around this event because it was the first appearance here of Tom Mix as a dramatic star and all that we have believed of him has come true. He proved to be extremely clever in his new sphere and not only does all the things for which we have loved him in the past, but adds to them a new dramatic sense that made the play exciting.

The play has a clear and definite story to tell. It deals with a pair who have been betrothed since their childhood, but who have been separated since early youth. Each journey to a western town without knowing the other's identity. The man who has the prospect of marrying the girl he has never seen, promptly falls in love with one whom he this girl and his oblivion to his own being and nearly being killed through being mistaken for a cattle rustler, manages to get out of his difficulties.

The exciting incidents he goes through in his unselfish regard for believes to be a maid; and after res. interests makes it thrilling drama. We knew what a splendid horseman he was, but until this play we never did appreciate how fine an actor he is.

In the way of giving pleasure and thrills, nothing better can be imagined. William Fox is to be congratulated on having made a star of this fine fellow, and the patrons of the theatre where it plays, who have not yet seen it, have an unusual treat before them. Today is the last time to see this picture here.

ARCADE

Marguerite Clark in Her Latest Picture

For her latest picture, "The Seven Swans," in which she will be seen today and tomorrow at the Arcade Theatre, Marguerite Clark has chosen a fanciful, elaborate version of one of Hans Anderson's best-known fairy tales. This was adapted and directed by J. Searle Lawley, who directed "Snow White," one of the most popular films of ascension. The cast of "The Seven Swans" is exceptionally good, including such well-known players as Richard Barthelmess, Daisy Belmore, William Dunforth, Augusta Anderson, and others. The story follows the adventures of Miss Clark as the Princess Tweedledee in saving her seven brothers from the clutches of the Wicked Queen, who transformed them into swans. One of the largest sets ever used was erected by Director Lawley—a palace courtyard, measuring more than one hundred by two hundred and fifty feet.

"MOLLY GO GET 'EM"

Five-Part American Featuring Margarita Fischer Proves Attractive in Comedy Scene Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald in Moving Picture World.

The tomboyish capers of a half-grown girl usually make attractive material for screen presentation, and in "Molly Go Get 'Em," a five-part Mutual-American, there are no end of amusing situations, some of them too similar perhaps, in which Margarita Fischer gets a chance to portray the role of the kiltless heroine. This she does in a graceful manner with the exception of the fact that once in a while her actions appear studied rather than spontaneous. The production has been carefully directed and is pleasing in the choice of exterior location.

The story of the play, by-the-way, is more a matter of incident than regularly constructed drama. These incidents are of the comic sort and have to do particularly with a young girl's mischievous interference with the matrimonial prospects of an elder sister. Molly is without conscience with regard to most things, sorely trying her father's pocketbook as well as his patience, and our first introduction to her finds her on her knees sneaking out of sight while her father pursues a $198 bill for a gown which Molly has just purchased and charged to him. Among the mischievous things which she does is an escapade with a beau of her sister's, with whom she goes to a ball in spite of the fact that she is still a sub-deb, arrayed in sister's best ball gown. A walk home when the motor of the young man's car refuses to work finishes the event and lands Molly in her room for a ten-days term of bread and water diet. One of the final incidents finds her bringing in at a pistol's point a bogus count who has entered her sister's room and stolen her jewels, after which she elopes with the young man next door, with whom she has long been

Mr. Grain Farmer:

Are you prepared to handle your grain in bulk? Do not wait until Spring and Summer when you are buried with work and worried with labor shortage, but build your granaries now.

You can buy the lumber and roofing paper for a first-class 1000 bushel portable granary for $54.58 and it will last for years. Sacks for the same amount of grain will cost you $125.00 and this would be a dead loss against this year's crop.

A granary of this size can be moved anywhere and can be filled directly from the threshing, doing away with high priced labor handling and sewing sacks.

The boys in the trenches need the sacks for sand bags for the protection of their very lives and perhaps your boy is among them.

Spend your money in your own valley by buying lumber manufactured at home. When you buy sacks part of the money goes to India.

BUILD YOUR GRANARIES NOW

Be prepared by building them before the farming season opens up. Be sure to get good lumber, well seasoned, as low grade lumber will give you trouble in a few seasons. Don't use green lumber.

Save money—keep what you spend at home—prevent loss and damage from exposure to weather—leave the sacks for our boys in the trenches; help win the war by building granaries now.

Portable granaries of this type are universally used in other sections. One trip with a good team will haul the material for one granary. For particulars as well as prices on Union County lumber for all farm purposes, see
