Hat Style and Quality put the GO in Gordon

A hat as popular as the Gordon must be right. It is on the majority of heads everywhere. There's a distinction between correct style and eccentric headwear. You are always safe in a Gordon.

Let us show you the hat for you.

SHERRY'S

HOW BARA WROTE HER OWN DRAMA

Miss Bara gives the following version as to how she came to write:

"THE SOUL OF BUDDHA!"

"On my way across the continent from California for New York, I happened to see an article in one of the newspapers telling of the death of the woman spy in Paris, who was a famous dancer of East Indian religious dances. This conjured up in my mind the many mysticisms of the Far East. Never having portrayed a character of that sort I determined to make use of my time in planning a scenario embodying that feature.

"There is always something exciting about the East. I remember having read a book about the various religious beliefs of the peoples, who inhabit the far corners of the globe. In this book the religion, which is in itself one very undercurrent of mysticism that has appealed to all classes of men and women.

"Once I had the complete idea of the entire story I started to write it in scenario form and I was so imbued with the spirit of it that I barely took time to eat and only knew that meal time came around when my secretary reminded me of it. Just a few hours before the Twentieth Century entered the Grand Central Depot, I had the entire story complete and ready to be typed.

"The day we started in film the first scene of my story I was as excited as a child with a new doll. I have always given myself up heart and soul in all the other photodramas I have appeared in, but when one is playing a role that they have actually conceived and practically lived in the atmosphere, it gives an added zest to the work.

"THE SOUL OF BUDDHA" is an unusual photodrama and I hope that the public who have been my friends for so long will like my maiden effort at photoplay writing."

Miss Bara will be seen at the Sherry Theatre today.

MOST IMPORTANT, SIGNIFICANT AND EXCITING WAR PICTURES EVER SHOWN

These five reels of film undoubtedly contain as much live history in the making as any that have been taken during the war. They constitute an invaluable record of affairs in Russia from the beginning of the war in August, 1914, showing scenes attending the establishment of the Russian republic, and then the sad demoralization which followed upon the heels of German treachery and propaganda. There are actual fighting scenes taken at great risk by the photographer. Men are shown in the trenches at close quarters with the enemy, many of them falling under fire. No effort has been made to soften the stark realism of war, and views of the dead and dying are frequently shown; also instances of special heroism, as where one private carries his wounded captain off the field on his back.

These pictures are now being shown at the Star and will again be shown tomorrow. It is urged that as many as possible attend the matinees and thus avoid the large evening crowds that will want to see these remarkable pictures.
