Use a dampened sponge to seal your letters and to moisten the stamps, advises the Popular Science Monthly. The glue used on stamps and envelopes is made of bones and hoofs of cattle, and all sorts of rags are used in the paper. Besides, although they may have been sterilized, the articles pass through many dirty hands while on their road to you.

Good Lungs. Alice, age eight, who was in the second grade of school, was describing the wonderful chorus of the school which she attended, and also told of the songs that were sung each morning in her room. "And who is the best singer in your room?" inquired Alice's mother. Alice was quick to reply: "Why, mother, I can sing as loud as any of them."

How Proverbs Travel. Proverbs undoubtedly have a tendency to travel; they are carried from one land to another by emigrants, tourists, missionaries, tradesmen and seamen; but many which are closely similar doubtless owe their origin to no common stock, but the common experience of mankind.

ARCADE

FAIRBANKS TOMORROW

Douglas Fairbanks will be seen at the Arcade Theatre, beginning today in a new Arcraft picture entitled "Headin' South." It is a thrilling tale of two borders—Mexican and Canadian—dealing with the capture of a notorious band of Mexicans who defy all laws and governmental warnings. Fairbanks is an expert horseman, and his riding scenes at the head of two hundred cowboys are intended to thrill the most blasé patron of a theatre. The real Mexican border at Nogales was selected as the background for "Headin' South," disclosing views of conditions that will cause endless comment.

For these scenes a special train was chartered from Los Angeles to Nogales which included eight Pullmans and twelve freight cars, transporting over two hundred people and an equal number of horses, among which was "Smiles," the famous Fairbanks pony, who has a number of strenuous scenes. "Ginger," the Alaskan mammoth, who is Fairbank's favorite dog, was taken on the trip and on several occasions was given up for lost when he was on a hunt for prairie dogs.

HARD ROCK QUARRIES FILMED FOR SATURDAY EVENING POST STORY

Some wonderful opening scenes were obtained by Director Raymond Wells in the latest Triangle release, "The Hard Rock Breed," an intense drama showing the life of those men who tunnel thru huge mountains.

This intensely interesting picture will be shown at the Star Theatre today and tomorrow. Starting today is a series of Official War Pictures that will be shown each week. There is no story connection or plot to follow but simply a collection of war pictures that are being released in this country under the name of "Britain's Bulwarks." The one that will be shown today and tomorrow shows how England treats her prisoners.
