

BRAVE FAG-AN-BALLAGH FIGHTERS AND MANY OTHERS WHOSE IRISH VALOR IS CLEARING THE WAY IN FRANCE

There are no better fighting men in the British Army than the Irish troops. They have proved this in many a hard-fought battle. The Royal Irish Fusiliers are called 'Fag-an-Ballagh' boys, a Gaelic phrase indicating that they 'clear the way.' There are so many famous Irish regiments that all of them cannot be named here. Among the best are the Munster Fusiliers, the Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, the Royal Irish Regiment, the Royal Irish Rifles and the Connaught Rangers, with whom Brigadier General W. A. White of the British and Canadian Recruiting Mission saw strenuous service in South Africa. These splendid soldiers come from both the north and south of Ireland, one of the first heroes of the present war was Private Michael O'Leary, who single-handedly attacked and killed an incredible number of the enemy and won the Victoria Cross. O'Leary started his war service as a private in the Connaught Rangers, and he is now a captain. His whole career indicates that he does not know what the word fear means. Another splendid fighting man who hails from Tipperary arrived in New York the other day to join the recruiting forces of the British and Canadian Recruiting Mission. His name is Captain Thomas F. McMahon, of the Irish Guards, and he won the Military Cross in the Battle of the Somme. In September 1917 the Irish Guards saw very strenuous fighting in the Battle of the Somme. They carried all their objectives in their attack and then found themselves flanked by a nest of machine guns known as The Quadrilateral, and were subjected to a heavy fire from the rear. 'Finally,' said Captain McMahon, 'a blooming tank rode over the Quadrilateral, smashing the wire entanglements, and the position was soon taken by the Irish Guards and another regiment. I got hit on the head by a piece of shell and was bowled over, but fortunately I had on one of the tin hats, as we call the steel helmets, and it broke the force of the blow. There are thousands of Irishmen in the United States who can help win the war by volunteering now for one or another of the hard-fighting Irish regiments and share in 'Irish valor,' famous the world over.

BEST IN THE LONG RUN The First Infantry Guns Weighed 75 Pounds FOOT soldiers began to carry firearms about 1350, huge, clumsy guns weighing from 25 to 75 pounds. Mere hand cannon, iron or copper tubes, they were leveled by a forked support, and fired at a touch hole.
