Mrs. A. H. Prince returned this morning from a visit with her mother in Denver, Colorado, where she was called by her mother's illness. Mrs. Prince reports that her mother, at the time she left Denver, had only slightly improved.

Mr. and Mrs. G. P. Christie, Mrs. Emil Seelig and daughter and Ed. Smith, of the National Cash Register company, arrived home last night from an outing of a week at Wallowa lake. Two members of the party visited the ice lake, which is eight miles, about straight up from Wallowa lake. They report an enjoyable outing.

WALDO BACH FUNERAL

Will Be Held From Elks' Temple at 3:30 Tomorrow Afternoon.

The funeral services for the late Waldo B. Bach will be held tomorrow (Friday) afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. The services will be at the Elks' Temple and will be conducted under the ritual of the Elks, of which the deceased was a member.

The remains are now at the Dolnen kamp chapel, where they will remain until the time of the funeral.

MACHINE SALES GOOD

Harvesting Equipment Reported to Be in Steady Demand.

John S. Clark, of the M. & M. Co., stated this morning that sales of farm machinery are moving at a lively pace this summer.

Binders are going out into the country daily, while headers are getting ready to start. The crops in the Grande Ronde valley will prove to be much better than at first predicted—almost normal, the recent rains having improved the situation immensely.

Pictures in the Home.

A room without pictures is like a room without windows. Pictures are loopholes of escape to the soul, leading to other scenes and other spheres. Pictures are consolers of loneliness; they are books, they are histories and sermons, which we can read without the trouble of turning over the leaves.—Downing.

M'ADDO SPEAKS TO SHOP-MEN

SHOPMEN RECEIVE 68 CENTS AND TIME AND A HALF.

Order Is Retroactive And Applies From January 1—Eight Hours Standard Day.

PORTLAND, July 25.—(Special.) The following address was made by the Director-General of Railroad to the railroad shop workers at Hillyard, Wash.:

"Ladies and gentlemen, fellow railroad workers:—

"I wish I could make a speech to you, but I have overstrained my voice in three liberty loan campaigns and the doctors have forbidden me to make any speeches for a short time, but I do want to tell you that I am glad to see you and to be associated with you in doing a very great work for our country. To us railroad men has been assigned one of the biggest parts of this war. It depends on us whether or not the Kaiser will be licked ten times as quickly as he otherwise will be. I know that we are going to lick him ten times as quickly because the railroad men of the United States are going to do their duty to Uncle Sam—you are all Uncle Sam's servants now.

"No private interests control the railroads any more.

"Uncle Sam is in command.

"He has his hand on the throttle.

"He is running these railroads and you are going to help him make a success of it.

"I want to give you all just and fair treatment as I know how, but we are all servants of the American people, you and I alike, and it depends upon the way in which we discharge our responsibilities whether or not the American people are going to treat us right. The strength of our position must always rest upon public opinion.

"What I do for you from time to time must be done with reference to what is just, not alone to you, but to the public, which has got to pay the bill. I want to give you a square deal and the public wants to give you a square deal but the public wants you to give it a square deal as well. When your wages are raised how do we get the money to pay for it? We have to put up the rates on all the American people and if we do not treat them fairly they will refuse to sustain us in trying to help you. I want you to help me do the square thing for you. That is fair all around, isn't it? I know that the machinists and the shopmen think they were not treated fairly in the original wage commissions report.

"There are peculiar conditions affecting the machinists and the shopmen of the country and because I recognized that I appointed a new commission, the board of railroad wages and working conditions.

"They have made a report to me and I am working on that report and shall render a decision on the 25th of this month, when the decision is made I will want you to know that I have conscientiously done the best I could for you, having just regard to your interests and the interests of the public.

"I want you all to accept the decision like true patriots, putting country above self or selfish interests like our brave soldiers are doing in France.

"We owe that much to our splendid sons who are shedding their blood to make our jobs and our homes safe and to save human liberty through the world. If we all do our duty as well as our boys are doing theirs in France, we shall soon plant the Kaiser face downward and keep him there.

"Let every railroadman hold on to his job and back Uncle Sam to the limit."

A Confusing Invitation.

A man named Dodgin had been appointed foreman in a brickyard, but his name was not known to all the employees. One day while on his round he came across two men sitting in a corner smoking and stopped near them. "Who are you?" asked one of them. "I'm Dodgin, the new foreman," he replied. "So are we," replied the other workers. "Sit down and have a smoke."

ITALY REVIVES AFTER BIG LOSS

NATION NOW STANDS FACING FOE WITH WILL TO WIN.

Biggest Offensive Was Attack Against The Morale Of The Italian Army.

(By United Press.)

ROME, July 1.—(By Mail.)—A year ago, the Italian armies were within 12 miles of Trieste, and on the direct road to the interior of Austria. Today they are holding the line of the Piave River, overlooking the rich Venetian plain, now in the hands of the enemy.

But this picture of territorial relinquishment finds the Italian people nearer to true victory and realization of national aspirations than they were the day before the disaster at Caporetto. That triumph of German intrigue and propaganda, resulting in the rout of the Italian army, and the retreat to the Piave, was the first step toward the creation of the present national solidarity of Italy for prosecution of the war.

The extent of Italy's rejuvenation is illustrated by her tremendous defeat of the Austrian offensive, which began along the 109-mile front from the Asiago plateau to the Adriatic, the morning of June 15.

Unlike the previous offensive, this effort found the Italian armies ready and waiting. British and French troops fought shoulder-to-shoulder with the Italians in the mountain region, and in the last days of the offensive, American airplanes rendered important co-operation.

Austrians Cross Piave.

The Austrians, who made this drive minus the German aid which had characterized their former campaigns, were stopped in crossing the Piave at several points. Their greatest penetration here did not exceed five miles, however. Their losses were stupendous. Nearly a million men were engaged by them and their killed, wounded and missing were estimated at 250,000.

The Allies took the initiative on the mountain front on the second day, and eventually re-established the old line there. The tide turned on the Piave during the fifth day. Rains in the mountain region flooded the river, preventing the Austrians bringing up reinforcements, ammunition or food. On June 22, the Austrian retreat began. In some places it became a rout. They lost more than 25,000 prisoners.

After winning back their old lines along the Piave, the Italians, British and French began systematic local enterprises which have been successful in winning territory, inflicting casualties and acquiring prisoners. These continue as this is written.

Propaganda Offensive.

The Central Powers' biggest offensive against Italy during the past year was the attack of the morale of her soldiers and civilians. It coincided very nearly with the various "affaires" in France. It was finally crushed and defeated by the thorough exposure of Germany's treachery after the military defeat.

The moral rebound which came to Italy after the stemming of the Austro-German rush on the Piave was further strengthened by several other factors. Probably the chief one among them was the creation of the Allied "single front." Long before the appointment of General Foch as supreme commander on the Western front, the Italians were made to feel the unity of Allied interests which the British and French expeditions took up their positions on the new line of defense. That was after the Italians, alone, had halted the enemy, and the best appreciation of this feat is given in the words of a high Allied official, who said:

"Italy's resistance on the line of the Piave will live among the most famous deeds of battles of all ages. It is not too much to say that the cause of the Alliance would have been severely compromised, if not more, had not the Italian troops stood their ground and turned back the invaders from Italy on those celebrated defenses. I firmly believe that that great feat of arms not only had an objective result of enormous importance; I believe it has been of enormous service to the Italians themselves. They have come out of that trial with greater unity, with great self-confidence, and, if possible, with greater courage than they ever had before."

Italians To France.

Italy has shown her appreciation of the lessons and results of the Piave action by the dispatch of an Italian force to France. Her confidence in the reality of inter-Allied solidarity is further confirmed by the arrival of American troops.

Another great event in Italy's history of the past year is the Rome conference of representatives of the subject races of Austria and the resolution which resulted from the proceedings there. For many months previously, practically from the time of the Russian revolution, enemy intrigues and misled persons in the Allied countries had been doing their utmost to break the ties between Italy and France, England and America by a disparaging cam-

Miss Olga Garrigue Masaryk, who is called the "Jean d'Arc" of the oppressed Czech-Slovak race, of whom there are 250,000 under the hated rule of Austria-Hungary, declares that they will form a revolt against the Austrian tyranny. Miss Masaryk's mother is American and her father, Dr. Thomas G. Masaryk, a Bohemian, is the acknowledged head of the provisional Bohemian government.

aign against the former's war aims.

The principal attack of these persons was based on an alleged inconsistency between the supposed aims of Italy and her correspondingly alleged unjust attitude towards the aspirations of Italy and those of Jugo-Slavia. It is just and true, not only because it increases the cordial co-operation of the Allies, but also because it emphasizes and brings more into clear relief the principle for which we are fighting.

"Economically, the entrance of the United States into the war has produced a much more favorable situation in Italy. The closer cooperation in the operation of combined allied tonnage and the more scientific allocation of supplies has appreciably relieved the fuel and food shortage.

Today more than at any time since Italy's decision to join the Allies, the latter owe her confidence. She is holding practically the entire Austro-Hungarian army on her front, an achievement which is of the utmost value, now that Germany is free of the Russian menace. She is holding that army until her time comes to sweep it from her home-land.

THE TRUTH ABOUT CANDY.

HOW MUCH CANDY CAN WE EAT?

"Where Shall We Stop, to Stay Within the Bounds of Patriotism?"

That's a question which puzzles many of us.

We all know that we must "go easy" on sugar, as it is our duty to conserve.

And candy contains some sugar.

So how can we know how much to eat.

In the first place, we must not forget that our system needs some sugar, and this the Food Administration recognizes.

We must remember, too, that some people like their sugar in coffee, some in fruit and some in other ways. If you like yours in the form of candy, eat some candy—as much as the Food Administration permits—a certain share is yours.

The Food Administration is keeping in close touch with the sugar situation and advising the candy manufacturers as much as it can see its way clear to do so.

Everyone is being asked to save on sugar, and the candy manufacturers have been asked to save half on all they formerly used.

But that which is being given them is being given them because the Food Administration recognizes candy as a food and is willing to permit it to be made and sold. It also knows that the candy making industry is a big national industry and that it is the duty of everyone to help keep industries going at home at the same time that we are winning the war.

So the candy manufacturers are permitted to make a certain amount of candy and offer it for sale to you. But the Food Administration says how much that will be. When the sugar is used up, no more can be had. So you know that the candy you see on sale is there with the permission and sanction of the Food Administration. And that candy you can enjoy to the fullest. And while you eat it, or send it away to a soldier, if you prefer, you may know that every pound is high in food value—good, wholesome food, supplying the system with carbohydrates (fuel for the body).

—In normal times the candy industry uses only 8 per cent of the sugar used per capita in this country. Right now this amount has been cut squarely in two.
