Mrs. George A. Bardwell, recently returned from travelling in China, and who has been spending a few days with her sister, Mrs. F. S. Ivanhoe, departed this morning for her home in San Francisco. Mrs. Bardwell has many interesting experiences to recount on her travels in the Orient and has brought with her a large number of pictures illustrating the life of the countries included. While in China, Mrs. Bardwell made her home at Sing Tau, a sea coast point which was improved into a thoroughly modern summer resort during the occupation of the Germans. It will be remembered that this town was taken by the Japanese several years ago and was only redeemed by the Island Empire during the early part of the European war. Mrs. Bardwell's description of part of her travels and experiences is as follows:

"Sing Tau is largely patronized by the people from Peking and inland cities and towns, and justly—because the Germans have improved it and developed it into one of the most beautiful and modern summer resorts in China. The houses here are built of granite, large quarries being situated nearby. When the city was given up to the Japanese during the early part of the European war, it was stipulated that none of the buildings which the Germans had begun during their occupation were to be completed.

"One of the most interesting scenes I saw while in China was the village of sampans, built and financed by the American Red Cross for relief of sufferers from the floods which swept a large area of the coast country a few months ago. These are built in rows of five buildings each—an entire village consisting of 500 sampans. Over each row is appointed a captain, who vies with those of other rows in keeping his district clean and orderly.

"The sampan itself will accommodate, or rather does, accommodate from 5 to 7 persons. Its appearance is that of a long shed, with the exception of course that the roof is rounded. It is built of rushes over a framework of wood and a final layer of mud on top of this. One wall of the building is open and the other is equipped with a curtain which may be raised or lowered at will. These sampans have a floor of about 7x9 feet. Included in this is a raised platform at one end which is used as a bed. Under this platform a burner is built in. "In addition to caring for the physical welfare of the flood victims, the Red Cross aims to provide school and community social privileges. Industrial schools in which sewing and commercial subjects are being taught are quite frequent. As rapidly as the debris was cleared away from the affected towns and the houses were rebuilt, of course the inhabitants of the sampan villages returned to normal civil life.

"One of the favorite winter sports in China is ice yachting. I enjoyed this immensely, although conditions were unusually unfavorable during the winter I was there."

When asked of the modern improvements as to machinery and the general advancement and progressiveness in Chinese civil and social life, Mrs. Bardwell replied that although improvements are of course being made, yet China is a backward country and that manual labor is very cheap and used for purposes which may seem peculiar to Americans. For instance, instead of having corricks at their coal stations, the work is generally done by a string of men or women passing the fuel from hand to hand, very much as buckets of water are passed in combating fires in rural districts without other equipment. Seven or eight men drawing a large truck of cotton, iron or some other product are very commonly seen. The introduction of modern machinery has been temporarily checked by the war, said Mrs. Bardwell.

Continuing she remarked: "I have seen some horses drawing carts, but never have I seen a driver sitting on the seat itself as the custom is of course here. He will usually walk along the side of the vehicle but very often rides on a sort of a running board at the side.

"But of the whole, I believe that I was most impressed by Peking, the walled city of royalty. In the forbidden city, part of which is now used as a museum, the former royal family resides. They have been allowed $400,000 a year by the new government to cover their living expenses. The walls of the forbidden city are formed of blue tiles. Those of the imperial city are yellow.

"Another interesting feature of Chinese superstitions is their respect for the dead. I have seen several crooked railroads, built in that way in deference to peculiar and queer little graveyards.

Mrs. Bardwell was asked as to the educational advancement among the general Chinese population. It was replied that the Rockefeller foundation which will be opened next year has been promised to be one of the largest and most thoroughly equipped and modern schools of medicine in the world. The large number of medical students who have been coming to America and European countries to secure their education will thus have the very best of advantages right at home. The Y. M. C. A. and Catholic church is performing excellent work in the enlightenment of the Chinese.

Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Prince and Mr. Maloney were entertained Tuesday evening by Miss Enid Switzer, at cards.

Miss Helen Currey has gone to Vale to assist Mrs. George Huntington Currey in editing the Malheur Enterprise. Miss Currey will remain until the return of her brother, who is in the service.

Catarrh for Twenty Years

Mrs. M. S. Davis, 1607 19th Ave., N. Nashville, Tenn., writes:

"After having been a constant sufferer from catarrh for more than twenty years and after trying almost every remedy advertised, and having lost all hope, I very reluctantly began the use of Peruna about two years ago. Everybody says I look younger now than I did twenty years ago, and I actually feel younger—better, and weigh more. I am recommending it to my neighbors and all with whom I come in contact."

How a Salesman Suffered

R. J. Porter, Sterling, Col. writes: "For six months I suffered with a painful weak back. As a traveling salesman, I had to stoop frequently to pick up my grip, which I grew to dread as the pain when I straightened up was awful. Numerous remedies failed to reach my case. I was induced to try Foley Kidney Pills. Relief was immediate. Say, they are great! Any one afflicted as I was should try a bottle or two of Foley Kidney Pills."
