New Style Notes in Blouses

Until something in textiles more beautiful and more becoming than crepe georgette and crepe-de-chine, is invented, we may expect them to remain the theme of the story of blouses. The delicacy of georgette and the suppleness and sheen of crepe-de-chine are unrivaled and with this they are as durable as heavier fabrics. No blouses wear better or wash and clean so easily. The new blouses for fall and winter are still of these lovely crepes—they are still silk and head-embroidered, but there are a few new style notes that place them as belonging to this particular season.

Among these are new methods of shaping and finishing neck openings, the use of batiste for collars, cuffs, vests and frills. The introduction of two contrasting colors in georgette is an idea carried over from last season. It was too good to be discarded and appears in the blouse pictured with an emplacement of old blue crepe over a flesh-colored body on a blouse with round neck-opening. The white drill about the neck is of batiste and it edges the band of blue georgette that forms the cuff, making the daintiest sort of finish.

Small beads in a tendril pattern serve to border the dark chiffon and little buttons find a place for themselves as an ornamental finish, having nothing to do with the fastening of the blouse.

Another blouse of flesh-colored georgette is simple in design with a silk embroidery in color and a cape collar to redeem it from plainness. But one looks at it twice because of a little eccentricity in this collar. It is slashed in a "V" at each side and the edge of the "V" joined by little straps of georgette. This simple little decoration proved so good in the collar that it was introduced in the cuffs.

There are some very trim high-necked blouses among new arrivals with deeper shoulder yokes than those of the past season. They have long sleeves and hint of mannish styles—just a mere whisper of the mannish line in cut and finish—and they are made of the same sheer materials as their more-trimmed comrades.

A New Brown.

A new shade of brown is Cordovan brown—a reddish shade, supposed to be like old Cordova leather. It is a rich, warm tone that inadequately lives up to the Spanish note suggested by the name. Great popularity is predicted for it this autumn.

Metal Brocade Girdles.

On dresses of plain colors girdles of embroidery and metal brocades or woven in brilliant silks add a smart color note.

SHORT BUT EVENTFUL LIFE

Marie Pauline Bonaparte Crowded Many Adventures Into Her Few Years of Fortune's Smiles.

Marie Pauline Bonaparte was one of the numerous family of brothers and sisters of the great Napoleon. She was quite the most beautiful of the girls and the gayest in nature—two qualities that endeared her to her illustrious brother, but that also brought her more or less into trouble. Like the rest of them, she was born in Ajaccio and shared the rise of the family fortunes. When she was seventeen she married one of Napoleon's staff officers, General Le Clerc, and went to live at St. Domingo. He died in 1802 and, as a young widow, a mere girl of twenty-two, she came to enjoy the society of Paris. She was exceedingly popular, had her portrait done as Venus reclining on a couch after the artistic fashion of the times, and married the Prince Borghese. She went to Rome with him, but tired of it there and went back to her beloved Paris. Various escapades started gossip about her—especially her rather offhand treatment of Marie Louise, which caused her removal from court. This sobered her a bit, and she accompanied her brother in his first exile to Elba and begged, after his overthrow, to live with him at St. Helena. But this request was denied her and she died in her favorite city, Paris, of cancer. She was about forty-five and still young looking and exceedingly beautiful.

Korean Women.

In Korea women occupy a place in society which has no parallel elsewhere in the Orient. They are both better and worse off than in China or India or Japan—better off because there are more fields open to them, worse because they are overworked, often ill-treated, and until recently were actually enslaved.

One Thing Man Must Do.

Nature never provides for man's wants in any direction, bodily, mentally, or spiritually, in such a form as that he can simply accept her gifts automatically. She puts all the mechanical powers at his disposal—but he must make his lever.

Arteries of Commerce.

The Romans were the great road builders of history. Roads were the gliders which sustained the vast superstructure of their empire. When a new province was conquered it was laced to the empire with roads. Over these highways there poured into Rome the products of the four quarters of the then known world—silks, laces, birds, animals, tropical fruits and slaves. And out from Rome poured the legionaries and the chariots.

SETTLED QUESTION OF VOTE

Decision of English Registrar Almost Worthy to Rank With That Made Famous by Solomon.

Not since the days of Solomon, perhaps, has a more perplexing problem confronted a judge than that recently presented to an election registrar in England. A certain voter possessed a house which stood half in one parish and half in another. The question consequently arose as to in which parish, or whether not, indeed, in both, the householder was entitled to vote. After some discussion a ray of light was vouchsafed to Solomon. In which parish, he demanded, was the man's bedroom? Unfortunately, in both. Then was it that Solomon stood fully revealed; the infant, of mature years, should be cut in twain. The parish in which the head of the bed stood should have the honor of the vote. Which is all very well, except that there are many voters whose feet take them to the polling booth, but whose heads are no good when they get there. Does not the Italian proverb say, "If a man has not a head he should have feet?"—Christian Science Monitor.

King Victim of His Own Jest.

Probably the greatest admirer of perfumes among the old Asiatic monarchs seems to have been Antiochus Epiphanes the Illustrious, king of Syria, according to Don Marlin, who has gone into this perfumery question for the Los Angeles Times. At all Antiochus' feasts, games and processions perfumes held the premier place.

The king was once bathing in the public baths, when some private person attracted by the fragrant odor which he shed around, accosted him, saying: "You are a happy man, O king, you smell in a most costly manner." Antiochus, being much pleased with the remark, replied: "I will give you as much as you desire of this perfume." The king then ordered a large ewer of thick unguent to be poured on the flatterer's head and a multitude of poor people soon collected around to gather what was spilled. This caused the king infinite amusement but it made the place so greasy that he slipped and fell on his back in a most undignified manner, which put an end to his merriment.

The Tomato in History.

Edward Atkes of the Pan-American union, in discussing the matter of the tomato, said a number of years ago that the word "tomato" seems to be of Aztec origin, and given as "tomatl" by some authorities and as "tixtomatl" by others. The word still persists in some of the older Mexican town names, as, for example, "Tomatlan" and "Tomatepec." The weight of opinion among historical botanists is that the plant and culture for edible purposes began in Peru, whence it spread to other parts of tropical America. It is known that it was cultivated for its fruit in the warm climates of America centuries before the coming of Columbus to this continent.
