CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG AT STAG THEATRE

Clara Kimball Young and her own company come to the Star on Saturday and Sunday in her latest Select Picture, adapted by Charles E. Wittaker from the popular novel of the same name by Cynthia Stockley and directed by Robert G. Vignoni.

The story opens with the London debut of Mary Maurin (Clara Kimball Young), a young orphan of high social standing, who is being wooed by Lord Herriot. One of the guests is Major Anthony Kimball (William Miller), a power in South Africa who wears a ring, and therefore looks as he feels—out of place in a London drawing room. A letter from her mother brings the sad news to Mary that her income has been cut off by the failure of her guardian trust company; the girl decides to break off all relations with Herriot, and to join her brother Dick in South Africa.

In the land of tooth and claw, Mary is left by a drunken driver of the stage coach to spend the night in the open; ere long she hears the roar of the lions and three at a dark object, falling into a dead faint. Kimball, or "Kim", has heard the shot and rides up; he stands guard over the girl all night and follows her on the three-day journey to Fort George, where her brother is stationed. Dick greets her very warmly, but she receives a cold reception from his wife, Judy, and Mrs. Vellela, the belle of the colony, who is anxious for Kim. Stair, the resident commissioner, is smitten by the newcomer's charms.

The natives rebel; Kim, Dick and Stair ride off at the head of British troops. Many days later, Stair returns and tells them that the entire troop has been exterminated, and that Kim's dying wish was to have Stair marry Mary and care for her. To dispel her lingering doubts, he shows her an ear-ring which he declared Kim wore her.

After their marriage, Mary discovers that the setting is Mrs. Vellela's, and not Kim's; she also learns of Stair's cowardice and cruelty. She leaves him and sides off with a Kaffir boy, who tells her of a crazy white man, kept prisoner by the savages who spare only demented men—the "Fahib" also wears earrings. Mary determines to rescue him and Stair, now aroused to a realization of his baseness, goes to the hills with her where he receives mortal injury. Kim is rescued and Mary, restored to her true-lover, forgives Stair, who dies peacefully in her arms.

TWO PRIZE WINNERS

Helen Jenner, who has captured several prizes in aesthetic dancing is seen in the new Douglas Fairbanks production "Bound in Morocco", which will be shown at the Arcade theatre today.

Miss Jenner is one of the harem girls who interrupts a famous Arabian dance. Another interesting girl in the same cast is Mildred Lee, who won the Beauty and Brains contest recently conducted by the Photoplay Magazine.

BRITISHER TROOP OF PASHA IN GERMAN TOWN

LONDON, Nov. 25.—(United Press by mail)—"Yes," said a recently repatriated, wounded British aviator, who had been a prisoner in Germany since January, 1917. "I was in Munich during 7 night raids it was in the latter part of 1917. Oh, yes, you the wind up all right, yes then. We wondered many were happening so we first went the arena and were start. Our rifles were washed. There was a big chemical factory not far from our camp. Several bombs must have hit it fair and square. In the morning when we looked out there was not much of it left.

"Nothing came on us either time. Fritz noticed that this hospital camp was a safe spot, and built a barracks next door, and put down a gun looking station on the other side.

"It was wonderful how our fellows managed to peek out the factories. The town itself was not damaged at all. When we left Munich we marched right through the town, and though I saw several factories in ruins, I didn't see a single private house that had been hit."

A Colossus who had been in Essen during the raids on Krupp spoke of the frenzied panic that prevailed, and told how a mob of Germans, men and women, rushed into the hospital where the wounded prisoners were lying. They broke into the wards and merely threatened the English.

His comrade, in the next cot, they actually pulled out on the floor, and jumping on the helpless man, permanently injured his spine. This repatriated Englishman also had much to tell of the great material damage wrought by the British bombers, and the far-reaching moral effects produced on the evil populace in Germany.

How to Get Rich.

SHERRY'S

"FACE IN THE DARK" STARS MAE MARSH

Golywn's determination to present Mae Marsh in the most powerful plays available is responsible for the choice of Ives S. Cobb's compelling story, "The Face in the Dark," at the Sherry theatre, last showing today.

The young star craves every opportunity devised by the brilliant storyteller to sound the deepest emotions as Jane Ridgeway, daughter of a celebrated secret service man. Her father, whom she adores, has supposedly retired from the service, giving all his time to his new post of bank examiner. She eyes not know that he is in league with a bank of counterfeiters whose method of work is as original as it is cunning. The outer doors of vaults are forced while the inner doors remain closed. Actually the inner doors are opened, the money removed and in its place a similar account of counterfeiting.

FOUR-MINUTE MEN TO SPEAK

Members of the Four-minute men will be held in the city of La Grande. Members of the Four-minute men were carefully selected and they operated in every city of the country. Their specialty was in addressing audiences in theatres between acts, and in this manner they reached millions of people.

For their farewell appearance, the Four-minute men will discuss the war work of the Red Cross, a subject with which they are familiar as they have made three other appearances in behalf of this society.

The management of the Red Cross campaign wishes the public to distinctly understand that the pending drive is one for membership and not for funds. A membership card costs only one cent, and every adult is eligible. In the past, where funds were the principal objective, the solicitors have accepted fractional money and there have been stunts for the public to "chip in" on the ground that every little helps. This time, however, there will be no stunts nor collections taken, and solicitors are instructed to go after memberships exclusively. Of course, contributions will not be refused, for the Red Cross can find use for all money it receives, but it is membership rather than funds that the organization prefers.

Each person enrolling will receive a Red Cross button, a service flag, and ten Christmas seals. Where there are soldiers or sailors belonging to the household, an additional small red cross will be given to attach to the service flag. No receipts will be given this year, but instead the name of each person will be signed to the membership enrolling book.

Throughout the state a number of mass meetings are being held this week and every member of the Red Cross chapters is receiving special instructions on the part to play in the drive. The campaign is all ready for the opening gun Monday morning, at which time some 14,000 men and women will take the field in Oregon and make it a point to solicit every adult in the state.

RETURNED WITH BRIDE

W. Oliver Springs Surprise on His Friends in La Grande

When J. W. Oliver left La Grande in the summer to make a visit to his old home in Knoxville, Tennessee, he publicly announced that he expected to be away six months, but he didn't take the public altogether into his confidence about the proposed trip. That fact is now revealed when he returns with a bride. Mrs. Oliver was formerly Miss Gertrude Taylor of Knoxville, and congratulations are being received from many friends in La Grande.

CONDITION OF PUBLIC SCHOOLS

one of the oldest log school houses in the county by a very pretty modern building. At Kanab's, the atmosphere of progress and the high aims, national ideals and small tendencies of the present hour.

At North Poudre, the high school has been standardized since the erection of its beautiful school building. This makes six standard high schools and two secondary elementary schools.

In all the drives for the preparation of our work our schools did their full share. They fought the battle at home without murmuring at the many calls for service. Indeed, I feel the spirit of service and sacrifice taught in our schools will live on and on and the reconstruction period of our nation's growth will find the youth and teachers anxious to do their part.

We had the honor in the War Savings stamp campaign of enrolling the largest membership in the first Junior Rainbow regiment and we were near the top in the subsequent four of them.

At the state fair this year one of our boys won a blue ribbon for his potatoes, and a girl for her canning. So these two young people will be able to attend the summer school at Corvallis next summer, for two weeks with all expenses paid. These prizes are a tribute to the industrial club work promoted in our schools.

We also have the honor of being the first county in the state to go "over the top" with a 100 per cent paid-up membership in the State Teachers association. We believe that the cause of education calls for trained patriotic teachers—100 per cent American and that no others need apply. Together we are working, not merely for the good of the individual, but for the good of all teachers. The little lady who has charge of the most remote rural school feels that her work is as important as if she were in the crowded center and is receiving for her faithful services, at the present time, a substantial compensation.
