

TAKE UP PEACE WORK

Great Britain Ready for Industrial Change-Over.

Huge Munitions Plants Prepared for Switch to Peace-Time Operations.

London.—England has her plans all laid for the great industrial change-over.

There are about 5,000 large concerns which have been engaged in munitions work.

These factories have been preparing for months for the "quick change" and are ready to switch to peace-time operations immediately.

Munitions is by no means the only branch of industry where sharp readjustments will be necessary.

The ministry of reconstruction, which has been operating for more than a year, and which has made an extensive survey of the industrial problem, has aided manufacturers who have been engaged on war work in the preparations for the advent of peace.

To show how extensively the ministry has worked, 20 subcommittees of experts have completely surveyed as many parts of the neighboring field and have drawn up plans for the change over, which have been placed at the disposal of the industrial chiefs.

Demobilization plans have been given careful study, and, while the official report has not yet been issued, it is known that it provides for disbanding by the needs of different trades, and not by military units.

The ministry of reconstruction has dwelt particularly on the possibility of development of industries making articles formerly imported from Germany—such as electrical apparatus, hardware, stamped metal and telephone apparatus.

And it is fully stated that "Britain is going to make a lot more of these things for herself after the war."

THE CURE OF YPRES

Abbe Delaere, Ypres

The photo shows Abbe Delaere, the cure of Ypres, who was the last civilian to leave the city. After months of hardships in this shell-ridden hole, during which time he climbed up into the steeple of his church to extinguish fire-bombs, Abbe Delaere gathered up more than one hundred children, some of them maimed by the Goth's bombs and shells, and took them to a chateau near Ypres.

Enter the Airplane Coat

Here is the new airplane coat. It made its bow and was introduced to an admiring and expectant world at the style show held recently at the Morrison hotel in Chicago.

Its most distinguishing feature is the square cape, lined with a silk brocade, that falls to the waistline at the back. This cape at the bottom is gathered into a band of fur and you would not suspect that by simply turning it up and fastening the band or fur about the head, by the very simple means of snap fasteners, the cape becomes a lovely turban with drapery falling about the head at each side.

SAYINGS OF THE SEAMSTRESS

Folks ortn't to wait 'til they git to the bar of judgment before they give an account of themselves.

It's easy enough to git hate out of your system when the trouble ain't your own. I reckon you better forgive my enemies and I'll forgive yours.

Mebbe it's nice for a woman to be called an angel, but they ain't many people what has confidence in angels doing regular work; it's out of their sphere.

You can go to a circus and enjoy seeing the man swallow a sword, but the minute I put a pin in my mouth, like dressmakers most in generally does, you git panicky.

I'd rather marry a sewer worker I understood according to my raising than to be worried to death for fear I'd leave my coffee spoon in my cup in front of a gentleman what looks down on me.

My land! Are you a-going to kill off all the ven what acts up, unbalanced like about other women? "Well," I says to Lanny (that's my husband) where would you git enough men to fight the war?"—Kansas City Star.
