SHERRY'S

"Rough and Ready"
William Farnum has another of those virile, fighting roles in "Rough and Ready," a melodrama laid in New York and Alaska. As one of the Alaskan dance hall girls remarked in-subtitle "He's a man." There was great emphasis on the "he." And there will be few able to repress the same sentiment. It may be spoken or merely thought but it will immediately assert itself. This is partly due the author and partly due Mr. Farnum. The former has given him a role that fits him as a glove. When opposed to a man he is all fight, when a woman picks on him he refuses to defend himself. Could a hero have more ideal manners? And Mr. Farnum with his fine physique and expressive face finishes off the role to the proverbial "L."

Of course we couldn't have an Alaskan picture without a fight, much less a William Farnum picture. In the sixth reel of "Rough and Ready" the big encounter is staged and it is a fight that the combined thrills of professional wrestling and boxing matches would find hard to surpass. The ring is again the Alaskan dance hall. Everyone from the roulette dealer to the toughest girl in the place comes to a realization of what is going to happen when Bill Stratton (that Farnum) strides across the floor with fire in his eyes. There is an intensity in the situation that makes one catch his breath. Then, when a moment later he comes rolling down stairs out of the villain's room, the suspense becomes even tighter. With that the fight is on to the death. And Bill is the live one when it's all over. It is a real fight. One can see the muscles of the participants quiver.

"Rough and Ready" has been staged realistically and lavishly. The dance hall is huge and alive with a horde of people. The snow scenes are excellent and the Yellow Gulch street is a fine setting. Richard Stanton and Ed Sedwick, who prepared the story and scenario, have combined the elements of heart interest, pathos and melodramatic thrills in the right proportions. Their story is well balanced and moves forward with ever-increasing interest. Stanton's direction is good from every standpoint and the camera work of Harry Forbes is all that could be desired.

THE MOST DANGEROUS OF ALL DISEASES

No organs of the human body are so important to health and long life as the kidneys. When they slow up and commence to lag in their duties, look out! Danger is in sight.

Find out what the trouble is—without delay. Whenever you feel nervous, weak, dizzy, suffer from sleeplessness, or have pain in the back, wake up at once. Your kidneys need help. These are signs to warn you that your kidneys are not performing their functions properly. They are only half doing their work and are allowing impurities to accumulate and by converted into uric acid and other poisons, which are causing you distress and will destroy you unless they are driven from your system.
