"Suicide Pond," Made Famous by Whittier, is Now Shallow Stream

HAVERHILL, Mass., Feb. 5.—"Suicide pond," that "dark and dismal little pool," made famous by the poet Whittier, is nearly gone. Outlets made by farmers for irrigation purposes have reduced the pond to a shallow stream.

People living in the vicinity always have had a gruesome awe of the pond, which stood between two barren hills. Women and children, recalling its dark history, always shuddered when they passed it after sunset.

In John Greenleaf Whittier's day a beautiful young girl of the neighborhood was "found one morn in that pool as cold as the water lily's stem." Whittier immortalized her in his poem which he called "Suicide Pond."

And she went to die in that loathsome pool when the summer day was done.

With her dark hair curl'd on her pure white brow, and her fairest garments on;

With the ring on her taper finger still, and her necklace of ocean pearl,

Twined as a mockery round the neck of that suicidal girl.

And why she periah'd so strangely there no mortal tongue can tell—She told her story to none, and death retains her secret well!

And the willow, whose mossy and aged boughs o'er the silent waters lean,

Like a sad and sorrowful mourner of the beautiful dead, is seen!

But oft, our village maidens say, when the summer evenings fall,

When the frog is calling from his pool to the cricket in the wall,

When the night hawk's wing dips lightly down that dull and sleeping lake,

And slow through its green and stagnant mass the shoreward circles break—

At a time like this, a misty form—as fog beneath the moon—Like a meteor glides to the startled view and vanishes as soon;

Yet wreath it ever a human shape, and even a human cry.

Comes faintly and low on the still night air, as when the despairing die.

HAD NO LIGHTS ON CAR

James March ran his automobile last night without displaying lights. Chief Christianson noted the fact and asked him to appear in police court today. His case will come up at 5:00 o'clock this afternoon.

Enlistments Wanted Now!

Formation of a National Guard company in La Grande is now under way. There are many reasons why able-bodied male citizens of military age should investigate this proposition and avail themselves of it.

The day is gone when men grow up and become old without some military training. The training of a National Guard equips boys and men with better physiques; better brains; better carriage; in short, makes better men of them.

Those who enlist now have a voice in naming their commissioned officers.

Compulsory training is not a remote possibility. National Guard service will exempt from compulsory service.

FULL EQUIPMENT SUPPLIED

The National Guard of the United States was last Saturday voted $3,000,000.00 by the ways and means committee of the lower house in congress. The government has great stores of equipment, shoes, socks, two sets of uniforms, blankets, tentage, hats, overcoats, mittens—everything complete—that will be issued to the National Guard as needed.

The National Guards of Washington and Utah already have these full lines of equipment.

One-fourth regular soldier pay is issued to every National Guard member. For privates this amounts to about $5.00 per month and non-commissioned and commissioned officers proportionately higher. Two weeks or ten days' camping and training at America Lake each year at extra pay and keep, is another feature that should appeal to the virile youth in search of physical and mental betterment.

Territory contributory to La Grande is included in the area from which recruits may be drawn.

Address all inquiries to Commanding Officer, Provisional National Guard, La Grande, Oregon, or apply for enlistment blanks to any of the present officers of the Oregon Guard of La Grande.
