HOW THE MONEY WILL BE USED

Tickling the Soil of Ambition

This isn't a gardening picture—as such as the photographer and Ambitious Ambrose, here shown, would like to have you believe. Instead it is just one of those "atmosphere" pictures—a camouflage—meant to stir the ambition within your breast—and make you resolve RIGHT NOW to make a bigger, better garden this year than ever before. The war's over but there are many poor kiddies in the big city who could have more—if you produce more—to eat.

CASE 10-18 TRACTOR

The latest model Case tractor has arrived, the 15-27, a 3-plow machine. You will never know what power in a tractor means until you have seen this Case 15-27 at work. It has the most powerful 4-cylinder vertical motor ever put in a 3-plow tractor. This means less wear and longer life, greater efficiency. Starts and runs on the high tension magneto. No dry cells or batteries to give trouble in cold weather. Let us give you a demonstration. Will be glad to do so at any time.

EXPENDITURES WILL BE UNDER DIRECTION OF BOARD

Secretary of the Oregon State Chamber of Commerce Outlines the Working Policy.

"What are you going to do with our money?"
You are sending field managers throughout the state, telling us it is our duty to put up money for your new organization, and next week you plan on making a drive, having appointed county and city chairmen throughout the state for that purpose.

Your state membership committee chairman, John L. Etheridge, says he is confident of securing $50,000 or more outside of Multnomah county.
"Again I ask you, what are you going to do with the money?"
Questions like the above might come to your mind, to which Secretary Quayle replies:
This organization has fifteen directors, six of whom are east of the mountains. Multnomah county has two, and the balance of the state west of the mountains has seven.
This money will be spent as authorized by your board of directors and in no other way. No man nor set of men from any particular section of the state will have disposition of these funds. Several hundred dollars have been received so far, not one cent of which has been checked out of the bank at Baker, which is the depository to date, William Polman being the treasurer of this organization and the funds are deposited in his bank.

An outline of the working policy for 1919 was submitted to the directors, and the opinion of the directors was that they did not wish to assume the responsibility in outlining in detail the measures the state chamber would have favored or opposed but rather that they would prefer to have these questions submitted in the form of a referendum to the constituent bodies throughout the state, which referendum will be prepared soon and submitted.

With this explanation you may see that this money will be spent just as you dictate and you will have an opportunity, through your local commercial organizations, to outline the policy of the State Chamber for 1919.
The directors feel that first of all the interest of the farmer should be carefully safeguarded and that the Chambers should not favor any move except one that is in the interest of the farmer, because it is from the used and unused land in that state, subject to clearing, irrigating and cultivation, that the state must eventually depend for progress.

This leads us to give careful consideration to the question of roads in all parts of the state, irrigation and drainage, making use of cut-over and overflowed lands, demonstrating the one-family farm unit as outlined by the land settlement commission, the fostering of industries throughout the state, including that of fishing; development of educational institutions, and by no means should be forgotten the agricultural, horticultural and dairy interests. Our great assets in lumbering should receive close attention and with it, better transportation facilities and ships to convey our lumber and farm products to markets of the world.

Some may think it is not necessary to give such attention to the tourist traffic, but the tourists made California and several of the eastern states what they are today.
Each district in the state has been working too much within itself, and hoped-for results have not been obtained. This State Chamber of Commerce should be really clearing houses for all local commercial organizations, bringing each in closer touch with the other, and with combined efforts, Oregon will be recognized as the foremost state in the Union, along constructive lines.

This office has received more inquiries from prospective settlers in the last two months than for the same length of time at any previous period, and "Let's go to Oregon" seems to be in the minds of people in all walks of life from the south and middle western states.
Let us all get behind this organization—forget differences in the past and put Oregon in the first rank."

VISITORS AT LAND OFFICE
Wm. Quinn, of Baker, was in La Grande today and filed application at the local land office for 637 acres of grazing land near Baker. The application has been suspended until it is determined whether the land in question comes under the act covering these grants.
Wm. R. Peck, of Palmer Junction, was also a caller at the receiver's office today and made application for an isolated tract.
