Newell, of La Grande, vice president; H. L. Kilgore, of Sumpter, Secretary. The board of directors will comprise the above mentioned, including George Cherry of Wallowa, and H. M. Newell.

The company has in its holdings the business in La Grande known as the Vermont Marble & Granite Co., which has many fine, large monuments throughout the eastern part of the state. It has a ninety-nine-year lease on a vein of marble, blue in color and of a texture and composition that promises to surpass the Vermont marbles, for monumental work, as well as building.

Machinery will be installed to operate and to do all carving, polishing and cutting, which will eliminate the heavy expense of monumental work now being charged by dealers in this line. The plans of the company are to do a large retail business for the present, possibly branching out into the wholesale end if the business in the future.

E. E. Amsden, the president and manager of the company, has had wide experience in stone and minerals and is well versed in this line of work.

AROUND THE EDGES

Down at Corvallis Walter Pierce has a reputation as a humorist. The way he acquired that reputation is both amusing and enlightening. Walter was invited to speak at a big banquet and he accepted the invitation for everyone knows his ability as a speaker. Dinner and breakfast talks. On that occasion the elite of Corvallis, including the O. A. C. family had turned out and Walter was "dressed up" in his morning clothes. He was at his subject with his usual vim and was slipping slides upon top of slides. So earnest did he get that he began to perspire. Reaching for what he thought was his handkerchief he pulled it out and found it had become a bit with a funny story. The audience roared with laughter and Walter proceeded. He turned again at his handkerchief and again the audience laughed. Repeating this several times he had the audience in convulsions of laughter and applause. Every word he uttered seemed to start a new avulsion. Finally the crowd was screaming down the speaker's face and he felt that he had must have had his handkerchief. He gave a hearty yawn, stepping from his speech line and took a few deep breaths. He did not speak, but immediately sought refuge in the wings of the stage for he had been pursued by his own yawn instead of his handkerchief and his audience cheered him to the skies for several minutes after he had made his exit.

Down good men and made excellent workmen irresponsible.

"Bill" Mosby had squared himself against the cigar case in the Imperial hotel in Portland and was waiting to say hello to the Eastern Oregon crowd that is always coming and going. And then Bill grew resentful to the extent that he reviewed his career in La Grande, told of the advancement, mentioned frequently what many are inclined to term "the good old days." Bill is now a land owner around Portland and works when he feels like it. He still has the trading habit however, and if he hits on a day when the share are right he is liable to turn several thousand dollars' worth of business before the sun sinks behind the coast range mountains.

The United States National bank people will know what spring house cleaning really means when they break up their home and move out in order to let contractors and builders rehabilitate the interior. Sweet dispositions among the employees will fade and it is believed that even Tom will cease to wear his party snail about the time he falls to find an adding machine or a note pouch in its accustomed place.

The good roads delegation leaving today for Portland should stick closely to Simon Benson, of the Highway commission. He is important in the road matter and besides he is good guide for the fellow from the country to know when visiting the wicked city. Mr. Benson was the original dry seal of Oregon.

Seattle has the world beaten for motorcars. Last week two of them were riding in an automobile in company with some J. Lehighers' relatives and the automobile pole seemed to be in the middle of the street. They hit it, and it remains to be seen whether their skin will get by.

Eastern Oregon people are glad Frank Griffith's street railway system is starting on better car fare for now Frank has sufficient money to keep his cars in repair. It used to be when an Eastern Oregon man wanted Portland he could not sleep because of the fat wheels.

The spring weddings that are slated for this year are many and every summer in town is expected to be compelled in work overtime to take care of the hot crop.

It will not be long until the New England fair will start and then there will be one exhibition held in La Grande and that will be a history maker.

The machine is making Charlie Roberts get out his fishing tackle and give it an overhauling.

How about the garden? Have you forgotten it so soon?

Probably Antelope Park? A lot has been in the habit of sleeping on a rubber mat under a stream in Cleveland's river bottom. Somebody covered the mat and we cut upon it. It didn't seem to hurt the mat, but for some reason it has not been used since the business of the park.

When Charlie Brown... A good fellow named Charlie Brown was out with a very good dog. So that the end of the dog's nose was 600. Then Charlie Brown went on to the side, green tongue out and he said the dog was very happy.

PROPAGANDA WORK OF IDEAS

the name, "Yankee Doodle."

There were occasions when a fool would cry out that he wanted to talk to an American officer. A lieutenant by captain, with an interpreter, would go down to the officer to meet him, and the three would stand there in the cold, arguing. These conferences usually began with mutual inquiries about the state of health of prisoners held by the respective forces and ended in the request that an armful of Bolshevik printed propaganda be handed to the American troops. (Perhaps this was meant all the while of warfare, but the British officers generally could not be depended upon to keep the troops happy. They would laugh all night when reading it.)

It was on the same sector that the Bolsheviks thinking that they might stir up discontent among the American soldiers if they knew that the war in France had ended, decided to advertise the fact. This they did by handing over the stream lanes red banners printed in white English letters on the red background containing for the news that Germany, France and England had made peace, and inviting the Americans to come and do likewise.

Learn to Use Both Hands.

You have noticed perhaps that left-handed people seem to have an advantage over right-handed people in being able to use the right hand with greater ease than right-handed people can use their untrained hand. It is a good thing to practice writing and drawing with the left hand.
