FELT PRY FOR VAIN MAN

"So Full of Himself That He Has No Room for Anything Else," Wrote William Penn.

A vain man is a nauseous creature; he is so full of himself that he has no room for anything else; he is never so good and deserving.

"The I at every turn that do this, or can do that. And as he abounds in comparison, so he is sure to give himself the better of everybody else; according to the proverb, all the geese are swans."

They are certainly to be pitied that can be so much mistaken at home.

And yet I have sometimes thought that nothing can put out of countenance with themselves, though they neither have nor merit other people's.

But at the same time one would wonder they should not feel the blows they give themselves or get from others, for this intolerable and ridiculous temper; nor show any concern for that which makes others blush for, as well as at them, viz., their unreasonable assurance.

Whereas the greatest understandings doubt most, are readiest to learn, and least pleased with themselves; this, with nobody else.

For though they stand on higher ground, and so see further than their neighbors, they are yet humbled by their prospect, since it shows them something so much higher and above their reach.

And truly then it is, that sense shines with the greatest beauty, when it is set in humility.—William Penn, in "Fruits of Solitude."

POE'S PLACE IN LITERATURE

America Has Not Accorded Due Honor to Her Gifted Son, Is Opinion of Hamilton W. Mabie.

A national literature must have many notes, and Poe struck some which in pure melodic quality had not been heard before. As literary interests broaden, and the provincial point of view gives place, the American estimate of Poe will approach more nearly the foreign estimate. That estimate was based on the recognition of Poe's artistic quality and of the individuality of his work. Lowell and Longfellow continued the old literary traditions; Poe seemed to make a new tradition. The artist always pushes back the boundaries a little, and opens a window here and there through which the imagination looks out upon the world of which it dreams, but which it sees so rarely; and we are not prone to mete out with mathematical exactness our praise of those who set us free. If we lose our heads for a time when Kipling comes with his vital touch, his passionate interest in living, his humor is not great. Poe may have been over-valued by some of his eager French and German disciples, but, after all deductions are made, their judgment was nearer the mark than ours has been; and it was nearer the mark because their conception of literature was more inclusive and adequate.—Hamilton W. Mabie.

Finding Fault.

Addison says, "What an absurd thing it is to pass all over the valuable parts of a man and fix our attention on his infirmities!" But that seems to be the habit. About the first thing we try to find in a man is his faults. They are apt to transcend his virtues, even if the virtues are mountain high. It is a deplorable habit, for it not only does great injustice to the person criticized, but it hurts the critic himself. It lowers his views of life and confirms the habit of seeing the worst side of human experience and losing sight of the bright side. No man can be a moral man, or a religious man of any faith, who is constantly searching for the faults of people. The first duty a man owes to his neighbor is to look for the bright side and he will then find, in most cases, that the dark side is much smaller than he suspected. The thing to attack is the sin, for we will discover that that is greater than the man who is guilty of it.—Ohio State Journal.

Our Sister in Typhoid.

In his "Past and Present," that opening sun of the mid-nineteenth century radical campaign, Thomas Carlyle tells a grisly story of a poor Irish widow in Edinburgh, who begged for help. "She was refused, till her strength and heart failed her; she sank down in typhoid fever; died, and infected her lane with fever so that 17 other persons died of fever there in consequence. The forlorn Irish widow applies to her fellow creatures, 'Behold, I am sinking. I am your sister; one God made us.' They answer, 'No, impossible; thou art no sister of ours.' But she proves her sisterhood; her typhoid fever kills them; they are actually her brothers though denying it."

Do You Sleep Well?

To be at his best a man must have sound, refreshing sleep. When wakeful and restless at night he is in no condition for work or business during the day. Wakefulness is often caused by indigestion and constipation and is quickly relieved by Chamberlain's Tablets. Try a dose of these tablets and see how much better you feel with a clear head and good digestion.—adv

HIRAM JOHNSON.

URGES WEST TO BUY SECURITIES

Cost of Bringing Soldiers Home and Finding Them Jobs Must Be Met

United States Senator Hiram Johnson of California sends the following message on reconstruction to the people of the West:

"Although the war has been won, the bills have not all been paid. It is as great a patriotic duty to support the Government now as it was to make sacrifices while the war was on."

"The boys who carried Democracy's banner gave up everything, their jobs, their homes, their all to do their country's service. Now they must be brought home. The expense of returning them to this country and of securing suitable civilian positions for them must be met as patriotically as was the expenditure required for carrying on the war."

"Every loyal American should invest in War Savings Stamps, Liberty Bonds and other Government securities, that they may help the nation as well as themselves."

"Investment in Government securities has not for long been afforded the workman and small wage-earner. Now the doors have been opened and every man, woman and child in America can lend to the Government and receive an adequate return."

"A new era of thrift has arrived. It is a heritage of war. I can think of no better way for Americans to show their patriotism and their desire to help Uncle Sam 'finish the job' than by investing in Thrift and War Savings Stamps and Liberty Bonds to the limit of their ability."
