A PROTEST

To the Editor:—Reading an editorial in The Observer a few days ago, I noted you go strong on good roads which is all very well. But speaking of Union county as being such a progressive one and not wanting to send the future generation to other parts of the United States to seek a more prosperous community because we haven't good roads, I think you might bear in mind that it would be safer to go to a county which has its postoffice in a neighborhood except in a neighborhood surrounded by children.

It seems to me that the county and city officials are trying to make good business for the doctors and undertakers. To say the least those who are responsible for the present location of the postoffice should be committed to that institution for ninety days.

If the county hasn't the money to purchase the proper location for a postoffice, let's bond the county and build a postoffice and a good road to it.

NO DAINTY DISHES SERVED

Coarse Fare! All That is Offered to Diners Who Celebrate the Birthday of Samuel Johnson.

An unusual celebration of the dinner in honor of Dr. Samuel Johnson, most distinguished English writer of the eighteenth century, given for the first time on the anniversary of his birth at LaGrande, where he was born in 1709. The dinner was all over England assembled at the dinner table. The menu always has been the same. The "fare" beloved by the author of "The Dictionary" would call for a good deal of all the trimmings, for the dishes specified are: Roast mutton, pudding with kidneys, horse of mutton, oysters, mushrooms, cold beef with cream and roasted cheese, ale and punch, to be followed by a dish of strong tobacco and a chocolate-walnut pipe for each participating guest. This is strong stuff for a strong man and a fitful Johnson dinner is always a "treat" affair. The house in Dr. Johnson's square, where Johnson was born is now a museum and library of rare first editions of "Massius," the "Adventurer," the dictionary, "Rambler" and Johnson's political tracts and political works, as well as about 40 different editions of Boswell's "Life."

England's Gleaming Bell

The "gleaming bell" is known in some places—as at Driffield, Yorks—as the "lucifer bell," and is sounded at five in the morning and seven in the evening to mark the hours of labor in the field.

Among the old records in the parish chest at Farrow-on-Humber is an instruction to the parish clerk "to ring a bell every working day morning and evening at sun setting until harvest be fully ended, and for this service each of the cottagers shall give him two peck of wheat."

The clerk at Eddington, Rutland, is entitled to charge each adult cottager 1d. for ringing the "gleaming bell."—London Chronicle.

Vegetable Wax

A Japanese industry which has made remarkable progress in recent years is that concerned with the extraction of vegetable wax, which is finding its greater demand on foreign markets.

We Deny It--

Our competitors accuse us of being envious—not so; we don't envy their great stocks, great capital, great equipment, and their great big ledgers full of charge accounts, dollars and dollars of which they will never collect; but they are not the losers—if they were they wouldn't be here—your most consumers who pay your bills PAY THOSE LOSSES!

No, they possess nothing to make us envious; and they boast about the thrills we make at their business. We wonder who is the best at this thrall business. They have warned you that we are chicken thieves; that our ads are false; that we just hand you any old thing, and that we haven't horse sense—but they forget to tell you that we are getting the business, and that why they are envious; they are just overlooking the fact that they have some real competition—the first in years.

Sometimes we feel sorry for the big fellows; they don't seem to know that when a big guy tries to ride over a little guy the crowd is always with the little fellow, especially when he gives you all the advice you want and sells you QUALITY MEAT FOR LESS.
