Believe Mangrove Walks.

Off the west coast of Africa, where mangroves are very plentiful, the natives have many curious superstitions about the mangrove tree, which is supposed to walk around in the water at night and is thought to be under the direct influence of spirits. These trees are plentiful in the southern states, especially in Florida, where they literally form jungles impenetrable to man but the paradise of water birds.

County School Superintendent Back—

Miss A. E. Ivanhoe, county school superintendent, has returned to La Grande from Salem, where she had been for a couple of weeks as one of the committee given the task of revising the list of text books for the schools of the state and selecting new books where worthy and necessary ones were found. Miss Ivanhoe considers this work the most important she has ever been called upon to undertake during her long experience in educational affairs and it was with full appreciation of the importance of their work, she says, that the various members of the commission performed their duties. For her own part, says Miss Ivanhoe, she has been gathering information from teachers and others for two or three years regarding the usefulness of many books that have been on the lists and getting expressions of opinion as to what new books were thought should be in the schools. She has made extensive examinations of scores of books during the same time, with the same idea in view, and all this was put to use when the committee finally met for selection of the new texts.

Every book submitted was given the fullest consideration by the board before being adopted, and if the vote happened to be a tie it was for or against all the merits and shortcomings of the text were carefully weighed before final action was taken. The result has been that not only the members of the commission, themselves but prominent educators of the state, feel fully satisfied with the conclusions arrived at.

A MESSAGE FROM GERMANY

TOUCHING MISSIVE THAT ARRIVED TOO LATE

Letter Addressed to Mrs. Blumenstein Reaches La Grande Several Days After Her Death.

A letter has just reached here addressed to the late Mrs. Minna Blumenstein from her sister in Germany. It is the first one in two and one-half years. It was first sent to relatives of J. H. Blumenstein in Switzerland and by them forwarded to La Grande.

After a sea of relay that a way has at last been found to break the cruel blockade of two and one-half years, the letter offers hearty birthday congratulations and expresses the hope that Mrs. Blumenstein's next birthday will be the occasion of great joy in a reunion of all her relatives and herself. Anxious inquiries are made regarding all relatives in America. The letter then goes on to state that conditions are greatly changed, that the writers and others are now youthfully slender, but that better times and more food stuffs are hoped for by all. The first American flour had been distributed the day the letter was written, April 29. Only one-half pound per person, and at a very high price. They have had only a minimum quantity of butter per week for the last three years, and the same is true of meat. The sight of the pure white American flour was greatly enjoyed by all.

Mrs. Blumenstein is also to be of good cheer, that all her relatives, even her aged father, are still alive. That her property has been kept intact and has greatly increased in value. Dwellings are hard to rent and are at a premium; houses are easily rented or sold at unheard of prices. One house had been sold at a good price and instructions are asked about the remaining ones. Volumes might be written of the distress and suffering endured, says the writer. Those who left they before the war are to be congratulated on what they missed, etc. Etc.

The letter from Switzerland to Mr. Blumenstein tells of prices still going up, rather than down; that needless wants are now in vogue in order that cattle can be sent to France, in exchange for coal. No private person is allowed to send food-stuffs out of the country. The post office will not accept it. The hope is expressed that the whole dreadful situation will soon end and something more human take its place. The tragic part of it is that the letter evidently met some delay in transit and did not arrive here until two weeks after Mrs. Blumenstein's birthday and one week after her funeral had taken place.

NEW SPARTACAN MOVE, ABORT

BERLIN, Friday, June 6.—The political mistake of the Bavarian cabinet in permitting the execution of the leader of the Bavarian Communists may result in another Spartacan attempt against the government. The effect, in a political way, of the execution upsetted itself in Berlin in the form of strikes of a general nature. And Socialist organs have opened all-out broadsides against the government. Ghosts of Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg rattle in the political skeleton. Lack of punishment of the murderers is showing itself in renewed agitation of the present epidemic weather, the storm will be because the allied reply to the German protests will be sufficiently moderated to insure peace satisfactory to the Germans. All Germany is normal.

REVISED SERIES OF ALARM CALLS

Sounding of the alarms Friday sent firemen scampering over the city several times in an effort to discover where the flames might be at their work of destruction. They found no fires, however. The firemen were simply trying out their newly installed fire alarm boxes, after rearranging the numbers in a more orderly manner. The citizens had been requested for several days previous to use the telephone when giving a fire alarm, but the new boxes are now in and they may be once more used whenever occasion demands.

The alarm boxes are located as follows:

CHRISTIAN CHURCH SUNDAY SCHOOL IS PLANNING PICNIC

The Christian Sunday school is making elaborate arrangements for a Sunday school picnic next Wednesday, June 11th in a beautiful location above Perry. Every member of the Christian Church is invited to attend and every boy and girl who belongs to the Sunday school and every boy and girl who goes to no other Sunday school is especially invited.

There will be ice cream for everybody and a box dinner and supper and coffee and other good eats will be cooked on camp fires. It is the desire of the committees in charge to see that each boy and girl has the time of a life there, and all should come to the picnic in their old clothes so they can climb trees, fish, play games or do any other of the thousand and one things boys can think of out on a camping trip. The committee wishes to impress it upon everyone that this picnic is for the boys and girls and that the older ones are a secondary thought. However, the committee wants every man, woman and child that is interested in the Christian Sunday school to be there.

Each person is to bring lunch. All are to meet at the Christian church Wednesday morning not later than 8:30 so as to ready to start at sharp 8:45. Automobiles will be on hand to take everybody.

All persons who can take a load of people to and from the picnic grounds in their auto will confer a great favor to the Sunday school if they will make their wishes known by phoning to E. W. Eastman at Black 1301 or Black 3001.

SAYS TRUE OF WORLD'S ACT.

PITTSBURG, June 7.—Telephone operators in the United States and Electrical Workers now are members of the telegraphers' union, will go on strike June 16 in connection with the telegraphers' strike ordered for next Wednesday. It was announced that the strike order was issued after a conference with Mr. Konenkamp and Chase.

"We will say this at the start: The strike of telegraphers will determine whether the grievance of long standing can be settled by force," he continued. "Peaceful means of settling grievances have been sought for nearly a year, but we were told by government agents in Washington that we could not get justice because our action was not sufficiently strong.

"Mr. Burleson has said he would confer, but only to complain that there were a lot of agitators, and he had a list of the telegraph officials for it.

NEW YORK, June 7.—The nation-wide strike of telegraphers, one of the features of which, it was announced, will be the tying up of telephones, "will amount to nothing," according to a statement tonight by Newcomb Carlton, head of the Western Union.

"The Western Union would like to assure the public that there will be no delay in handling their messages," said Mr. Carlton. "We will maintain a full force in all of our offices."

Relics of a Past Race.

The great ceremonial cave in Kiva, where the people's councils evidently assembled, is located two-thirds of the way up the side of a cliff, in a cave inaccessible, save with ladders. The temple is carved out of the solid rock, partly by nature and partly by hand. Little is known about the fascinating people that once lived in this beautiful retreat in New Mexico, although many of the symbols of a race that was are visible in the interiors of the recently discovered homes.

AN OUTLAWS' RENDEZVOUS

It appears that Conners, the Haines bank robber, reported to have been surrounded a few days ago in the vicinity of Thief valley on Powder river, got away.

This region of country, while being now inhabited by law-abiding and upright people, nevertheless carries a grim tradition as being the rendezvous of banditism in the days gone by. There is a report going that the vigilantes of 1865 left a man hanging to a tree not far up from the river near Thief valley. None of the essential facts of this report have been verified.

Near this locality, at one time was the headquarters of a bad outfit known as the McCarty gang. They came from Colorado and left a trail of robberies behind them, including a number of thefts of horses and cattle. The McCarty gang were charged with several bank robberies in this country, and it became known that their place which was kept up as a stock ranch was in reality a rendezvous. Two of the McCarty boys were afterward killed in a fight with officers in Colorado.

A Robber Plot Foiled.

It was supposed to be members of this gang that were thwarted in an attempt to rob an O.-W. R. & N. passenger train at the tunnel below Telocaset. This was about twenty-five years ago. The engineer of the train was Al Stephens, one of the old time passenger engineers of La Grande. He was coming from Huntington and passed North Powder about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Two or three hundred yards below the tunnel a danger signal was placed across the track. The engineer did not come to a full stop and looking ahead he saw a party of men wearing masks. He pulled the lever over, and he and his fireman ducked down in the cab and the train shot through the tunnel a-flying. The robbers were completely foiled as they had expected the train would surely stop on apparent trouble at the tunnel which would mean a wreck. The only evidence of resentment exhibited by the disappointed robbers was a rifle shot at the engine cab as the train flew by.

Engineer Stephens was heralded as a hero when all the circumstances became known, but the adulation was to a degree dimpled by the criticism of some who declared it a foolhardy trick and offered comparisons as to what might have happened if the danger signal had been on the square and the engineer had sent the lives of the passengers to eternity, as against the protection of the few paltry dollars the robbers might have secured in the hold-up. But the fact stands that Engineer Al. Stephens foiled the would-be robbers.
