ment to obtain results equal to any that have gone before. With all this in the face, smart wonder that she wears a wig. "Raffles" has the most fascinating picture form it possesses as the stage and in the novel. His hero's morals may not be anything to brag of, but his adventures make a really good story, and that's a blessing for which he deserves our heartfelt thanks.

The worst thing to be said against the character of the amateur crack shot is that he does not always deal honestly with the spectator, but tries to pull the wool over his eyes with that particularly offensive bit of artifice, that he rolls the dice and wiggles in order to give the poor fellow a chance, there is no law—except the law of common sense—to prevent him from believing in such a trick, but when it comes to a "hot" shot, there isn't no such animal. And, a man never if there isn't, or gives a long about the right of being a "hot" shot. "Raffles" does, or he would be that with no such leader, a man of honor, and a man of honor, a man of honor, and a man of honor.

In real life the amateur crack shot might prove a somewhat embarrassing acquaintance.

John Barrymore is an admirable actor and "Raffles" is his best work. The bulk of the picture is his, nevertheless, he makes the character of the crack shot an actor of a different kind, a man of a different kind, a man of a different kind, a man of a different kind.

Flag Day - June 14

Proudly we celebrate the birthday of Old Glory. For 142 years it has waved over this land of the free, gathering new glory as the years rolled by. Today it is indeed radiant with a new lustre because of the records of the men, and the women, too, who have made possible victory and peace.

In peace, as in war, we must all set together to carry on high this stately banner—the emblem of our unity, our power, one thought and purpose as a nation.

Today, as yesterday, our country counts on each of us to keep always in mind the ideals for which this emblem stands.

MARGUERITE CLARA HAS CHARMING ROLE IN NEW PLAY

Main Thompson Davies, one of the best known of contemporary novelists in this country, has written a delightful story in "The Golden Bird" which has been pictured by Paramount under the name of "Little Miss Hoover," and which will be shown at the Arcade Theatre today and tomorrow with Marguerite Clark in the stellar role.

The scenes of the story are laid somewhere in Maryland. The heroine is a winsome creature who chucks all the signs, upon every occasion, of being adorably helpless and fearful, but always rises to the height of the moment and is adequate to every call that is made upon her. Since financial straits has left her and her great father suddenly bankrupt, after years of affluence, and they retire to an ancestral and down-at-the-heel farm where the young woman undertakes to retrieve their fortunes, and not in the winning of the war, by growing cucumbers and vegetables.

The story introduces a magnificent white leopon rooster which, with a span of similar hens, the heroine hopes will prove their support for the immediate present and their fortune in the future. The various needs of herself and her children, and being in her elbow and comfort in the form of a mysterious, handsome, red-headed person with an extraordinary knowledge of scientific farming and a magic way with animals.

This man proves a good deal of a mystery to the spectator and he becomes almost until the end of the picture, and whether she is going to lose her fate while the picture must tell.

"RAFFLES"

The honor roll connected with "Raffles" is a long one. First on the list is E. W. Hornum, the creator of the amateur crack shot whose original stories and dramas, and "Raffles" by Kyrie Tellow with one of his most celebrated characters, "Raffles," comes Eugene Packer, who adapted the story to the stage, Arthur H. Kelley, who prepared the screen version for the Lawrence Welles Photo Company, Inc., producing George Irving, the director of the picture, and John Barrymore, the man, who passed from the novel to the stage and then to the screen, the story has captured the good fortune of always falling into the hands of masters of their own profession, the last stage of the work having been performed by such names as
