STORIES OF THE GREAT
MOUNTAIN WEST

SOME TALKING BY THE HONORABLE MISSISSIPPI

Charles Ray, the celebrated star of Paramount pictures, will be seen at the Arden Theatre in the new photoplay, "The Heart of the North," written by Edna Ferber and produced by Irving W. Miller and the supervisor is Thomas H. Ince, which is the usual trademark of excellence.

Norma Talmadge, the beautiful silent star, will be presented by the Arden Theatre in the new photoplay, "The Heart of the North," at the Arden Theatre (day only). This is an exciting story by George Scarborough. The scenario was written by Mary Maguire and it was directed by Sidney A. Franklin.

In this amazing photoplay, Mr. Ray portrays the role of Albin in Montana, a western town of the North, known as the "Heart." The scenes of the story are set in and about a beautiful spot in the "top of the world," and the story is tinged with pathos and romance. Intimate and dramatic, Albin is the star of the community of the town and when his father is diagnosed as Albin's best friend, many interesting developments occur, and the town of which are a part of the scene over the scene of drama, a pitched battle of an individual for the death of the mother of the young of Albin and the struggle of the town to save the man who has caused all this trouble.

The story begins when Quasimodo, chief of a tribe of Caspian Indians, finds that his daughter, Victoria, has been wronged by a white man. Victoria's mother was a white woman and Victoria has been brought up as a white girl.

Mr. Ray is fully supported in this story picture by the best screen players, which include them being Boris Lee, Robert Maclure, Glenn Davis, Charles French and Marjorie O'Neil.

Miss Talmadge is supported by Thomas Meighan and an all-star cast. A Harlequin comedy will also be presented and Mabel Douglas will be heard on the organ.

MAINTAIN YOUR

Among many interesting articles in a recent issue of the Physical Culture Magazine was one on the case of a young man who had been built up by medicine but on a strict fast. Following this the editor of the magazine had the following to say about "Hahnemann": "A brief history of this case has been given to illustrate the folly of relying on medicine. Many frail delicate women were helping themselves in this way, simply through overeating. They felt in wait for an appetite, but when it came it came at every mealtime it mistaken for a real desire for food. Miss Hahnemann's regular meal and observe if you fast your appetite 2 or 3 hours thereafter. If you do, then the desire for food was not real. The loss of the meal has been to your advantage. It could not have added to your strength. To build strength, foods must be eaten with a keen appetite. This is imperative! You must enjoy every morsel. They must taste just as good to you as they did when you were a boy, or girl, enjoying every moment of existence. When the food loses its flavor, nature is trying to indicate to you the stomach's need Plan Well Before You Begin. In our hurry to do things we often begin before we have a clear idea of what is to be done. We too often do general preparations without studying all the facts. The result is a failure.
