At present the world is not safe for lightwads.

Plans for gardens next summer need not be changed.

After Europe rid itself of its royal couples it will rest easier.

It's a wise horse who knows the day's raffish order on signal.

"Spray and pray" is a good enough slogan during the influenza epidemic.

It is announced that Spain is now rid of the influenza. Yes, we know where it went to.

If full details don't come into style again, it will be in spite of the price of safety razor blades.

Let's try to make supplies of cool water in the houses now be one of the war habits that will stick.

Nobody seems to be sending out any more letters to help the water and the pumpkin pie by over the top.

The "Ho" seems to hold to be divisible to the microscope. However, there is no trouble recognizing the tail of a knothole.

considering the general air of self content one can't blame the author.

Business best is to be shipped to Europe, but the summer will have to pay for the boat, and if he doesn't get it, he'll probably lose it if he had it.

The mail who doesn't believe women have business ability probably has a wife whose management of the home has enabled them to have a bank account.

What a man who wears hunchback clothes from neglect to look is afraid to put on an influenza mask for fear it might hurt his personal appearance.

Perhaps he has "an structural neck" for crying the other, a mail story from abroad says. Is there a that spot in "structural neck" large enough for a diamond?

Several Trapsan epileptics who once discussed influenza in Paris are now "convinced" themselves exclusively with the prospect of being kept in jail at home.
