

Mary Adel Hays at Chautauqua

Famous Coloratura Soprano of New York Will Make Fourth Night's Notable One

Mary Adel Hays, coloratura soprano of New York, will bring to all music lovers one of the great musical treats of the season on the fourth night of Chautauqua. Few new singers in recent years have attracted wider estimation or greater praise from press and public than Miss Hays.

RUSSIA DURING REVOLUTION DAYS

Rev. Joseph Clare of Petrograd Talks on Russia at Chautauqua.

It is rare good fortune that brought Rev. Joseph Clare of England to the Chautauqua platform this season, for he is bringing with him the most fascinating and enlightening story of the Russian situation that has yet come to the American continent. As pastor of the British and American church in Petrograd, Dr. Clare lived in the Russian capital during the war and the days of the revolution which followed. He enjoyed friendships with the great personages of Russia during those stirring days and his experiences are replete with thrilling revelations. To hear Dr. Clare will give one a better understanding of the Russian people.

REGNIERS BRING LIFE AND LAUGHTER

Two Splendid Programs on the Sixth Day by These Talented People.

It is entirely probable that you have never seen just such a thoroughly enjoyable program as the Regniers are bringing to you on the sixth day of Chautauqua. Breezy, snappy, bubbling with laughter, they have one of the most surprisingly unique entertainments of the platform.

Toy Joseph Regnier is an impersonator of unusual ability. As an Irish janitor, the stately old southern colonel of the great-sounding Italian front venter every detail as on perfect that he seems to know his own identity completely. And with such rapidity he does work that you have a vague impression that there are several characters on the stage at one time.

SEE - ROYAL GLORIES

Yanks Anxiously Ask "When Do We Get Eats?"

Only Statue That Interests Soldiers is Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor.

Paris.—Standing amid the glories of the royal past of France, in the park at Versailles, an American doughboy burst into this apostrophe:

"Say, pal, where do you get eats around these diggin's?"

American fighting men in leave parties led by trained guides from the Paris headquarters of the Young Men's Christian association war work council may be seen everywhere in Paris and its environs, enjoying the monuments of the old regime and of the empire in a truly American fashion, which does not prevent the association of the great palace of Louis XIV and "chow."

"Looks like a decayed church," was the deliberate estimate of another boy in khaki as he stood before the Hotel des Invalides. Then he went inside and became enthusiastic over the marble railing about the tomb of Napoleon—because it was so "white" and hadn't a flaw.

One of them emerged from the Invalides and grew almost poetic about the yellow light coming through the stained glass windows above Napoleon's casket. Then he caught himself, and almost blushed. In the next breath he called the Court des Invalides the "souvenir parlor of the armies of France." When he saw Guynemer's airplane and learned what it was, he maintained a reverential silence of more than a minute before he began to determine its "make."

Perhaps the reactions from Versailles are the most illuminating.

Halting at the Fountain of Neptune, a doughboy cast his eye appraisingly down the vista of the park.

"Gee," he said, "there must be two miles of fountains."

Most of all, apparently, the soldiers like to go and sit on the banks of the Seine—watching the river traffic.

The one-fourth size Statue of Liberty presented to Paris by the American colonies watches over them here. But even it is the subject of frank criticism.

"Hub," said one of the critics, "it doesn't look as good as the old girl will look when its steam hits New York harbor."

BRITISH UNHEALTHY AS RACE

Analysis of Reports of Medical Boards Shows Deporable Condition.

London.—The analysis of the reports of the medical boards who dealt with recruits shows a deplorable condition of national health.

A summary which is more or less typical of the whole can be quoted as an example.

Out of nine men examined three were fit for service and were good flyers; two were more or less unfit, but able to do something; four represented wreckage of one kind or another, some of it hopeless, most of it preventable. As far as the tables have so far been completed the average is as follows:

Fit, average for country, 10; London, 24; Scotland, 44; Wales, 41. Doubtful, average for country, 10; London, 12; Scotland, 8; Wales, 7.
