The old saying about the quality of weather in the immediate vicinity of a congregation of people who are blessed with the spirit of good fellowship and sociability is especially apt for application to the dance given Friday evening in the Rex hall by the members of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks. The weather man very graciously sent along a nice shower to cool off the atmosphere just as the evening's program was getting nicely under way, and the result was one of the most pleasing dances that has been held in the Rex hall this summer. Pretty much the usual crowd of local dancers was present, with a goodly sprinkling of visitors from around the district, and with Lindsay's orchestra, also a railway organization, interspersing at well judged intervals the soft, dreamy airs, in between the latest jazz stuff that literally put the hop on the fastest steppers, no one could hold himself aloof and fail to have a first rate time.
