The Bookworm

In answer to numerous questions: "The Zuyder Zee" is a body of water in the Netherlands, its depth from 10 to 15 fathoms. The Hollanders have reclaimed a million acres from sea, lake and river since the sixteenth century.

"Exploring a Neighborhood," published in the July Century, is well known by a librarian formerly located at Everett, Wash.

An interesting fact of the home life of children is shown by their comments on the care and library books. Children often tell the librarian that "my father is making me a shelf to keep my school and library books on," or, "I have a desk of my own now, with a key so the baby can't get into it," an unhappy incident is shown by the parents who take their little interest in the children's pleasure or learning, that there is no book for the child to keep his book safe from smaller children, or out of the reach of pets. It is hard to blame them for returning books soiled and torn to the library.

CONNORS WAS A BOY IN UNION

ALLEGED BANK ROBBER IS WELL KNOWN HERE

Served For Some Time in the Army—Is Reported to Be Clever

The newspapers have been full of late regarding Charles Connors, alleged bank robber who held up the Haines bank and made his get away into California. It is interesting to know that this young man was raised in Union, Oregon. When a news youngster he was well known to the people of that city and as he grew to manhood he was always considered a mischievous young chap but was not particularly bad.

Connors has had quite a career. He was in the service and with his uniform worked a number of people for small cash loans, always claiming that was a resident of Black or. His checks came back endorsed "not paid for want of funds" and he was getting along remarkably well for a man who neither toiled nor thought of toiling until the Haines robbery was pulled off and suspicion centered around him.

His chase for freedom is well known to Eastern Oregon readers and his final capture in California is also known.

When he lived in Union it is said that his mother was very brutal to him and although he was but a small child his head under the parental roof were many. Perhaps in his day of reformation he can capitalize this by giving lectures on "never whip the boy" or under some other as euphonious a title.

CADILLAC TO TAKE PART IN LINCOLN HIGHWAY TOUR

Two Touring Cars Will Represent Company in Great Cross-Country Journey.

When America's great transcontinental transport train gets under way over the Lincoln Highway, two Cadillac touring cars will be included in its vanguard.

Never before has such an assembly of motor cars and trucks attempted to cross the continent. Bearing the Indian names, "Navajo" and "Apache," the Cadillac cars call to mind those dark-skinned Americans who blazed our first trails and highways.

The tour is expected to serve as an extended service or performance test of the several standardized types of motorized way equipment, and will start about July 7 from Washington, with San Francisco as a destination.

The great strides in motor manufacturing and transportation during the past few years were well demonstrated by the performance of the American automobile in France. The Cadillac cars which will participate in this epoch-making journey are of the same model as those chosen as the standard seven passenger car for the Army.
