

Negligees From the Orient

In whatever corner of the world it flourishes a graceful, colorful dress is meant for the designers of negligees. They seize upon it and use it as it is, or interpret it to suit themselves in fabrics that they have at hand. Beautiful Japanese and Chinese garments are bought in their native countries and sold to Americans to wear as they are. Who would think of taking the liberty of changing anything so exquisite? Not all of them blossom only in the privacy of homes, for splendid mandarin coats challenge comparison with the handsomest evening wraps. One thing that entices the buyer of fine Japanese and Chinese garments is the stability of their styles. They are and were and will be good.

It is not necessary to attempt a description of the wonderful kimono shown at the right of the two figures pictured above. This enfolding dress is simply a graceful background of soft silk for rich embroideries of the iris and wisteria blossoms that are so dear to the Japanese. On a light gray ground in natural colorings they make the kimono a thing of beauty and a joy forever.

with long, flaring sleeves all made of lace and an over garment that forms a short cape at the back with a front of three overlapping panels. It is made of satin and embellished with embroidery. Wherever it was designed it may lay claim to both ingenuity and beauty.

Wide laces—flouncing laces they are called—make the way of the designer easy and are used in many negligees. Over underslips of silk they form long loose coats. Crepe-de-chine or fine mercerized cotton goods are used with them, the laces in cream color and the other fabrics in gay flowerlike tints and colors. All are washable and very often narrow ribbons and little flowers of ribbon or chiffon add another charm to them. The story of negligees cannot be complete without reference to the beautiful taffeta coats in light colors, to be worn over lace petticoats.

AT SHERROV'S TODAY AND TOMORROW

"False Evidence" adapted from the famous novel "Madelon" by Mary E. Wilkins. In a story of the west—a gripping romance of the Fredwoods, giving Viola Damm, a role that reflects all her vivid personality and dramatic powers. The play tells the story of a primitive plan, with traditions handed down from generation to generation among which is the custom of betrothal at birth. The first girl to rebel at this is Madelon, but her father, Sandy McTavish, is the strictest man in the settlement and it is his boast that a McTavish never breaks his word. How Madelon upsets this tradition and eventually marries the man she loves, is forcefully shown in this play that is filled with intense heart-appeal and which also sparkles with the inimitable humor of the little star. It is a romantic drama with a freshness that breathes of the pine-scented slopes of California where the scenes for the play are laid.

STARTLING LEAP IN SERIAL OF THRILLS

An amazing, reckless feat is filmed in the fourteenth episode of "The Men of Might," Vitagraph's latest adventure serial, which will be seen in the Sherry theatre today and tomorrow. Diaz, a Mexican, is unroofed on top of a cliff, and below in a stockade, are his friends, who are seeking the hidden treasure. Embattled about the stockade are "Scarface" and his outlaws, ready for an attack in his eagerness to join his friends. Diaz makes a catapult out of a small tree, and this hurls him out into space big habors the stockade. Into which he is catapulted by means of a powerful parachute.

The serial is one of the big parades of the season. William Dundan, who directed the serial, has the featured role, supported by an all-star cast including John Johnson and Joe Ryan.

HIPPODROME VAUDEVILLE AT ARCADE TOMORROW

Al Plezu is a talented young man appearing in blackface and presenting a singing and talking offering which he calls "Singing and Talking Comedian." He is the possessor of a good singing voice and his collection of comedy songs and parodies are without limit. He has his own peculiar way of putting his material over and has always proven a popular and amusing entertainer.

The acme of intelligence is unquestionably to be found in the remarkable performance presented by "Uno," a canine who has toured the various vaudeville circuits of the world under the firm name of Pop & Uno. Uno is also a moving picture star, having played the part of Nance in the screen production of "The Beloved Vagabond." Uno claims to be the only good-night dog in the world, from the fact that after performing his routine of tricks he prepares for bed and retires in full view of the audience. To see Uno work is to appreciate the human mind and dog many possess.

Connell & Merel, two versatile and talented female comedians who will present a comedy offering and talk of 60 minutes, which they call "A Classy Duo in Classy Comedy," consisting of popular comedy song numbers. They do double and single numbers that go over well and give an opportunity for a splendid demonstration of their vocal ability. They also have a good line of comedy matter that is the cause of much merriment.

Lo Dava, Williams is a clever man and woman who present a novelty surprise offering, which they call "The Escapes." They introduce many difficult and seemingly impossible tricks in which they defy the laws of nature. They also introduce a routine of eccentric wooden shoe dancing. This number is most seasonally interesting, entertaining and mystifying.

An "Out Door Picture and a comedy" will also be presented on the same bill.
