ROLLING STOCK SAVED IN TIME

OMER, via Vladivostok (Correspondence of The Associated Press)—Ninety percent of the railroad rolling stock in the Form, Ekaterinburg and Chelishinsk districts was pulled out before the territory was given over to the Bolsheviks, according to General Jack of the Inter-Allied Technical committee, 2000 cars were in the evacuation. Over 20,000 freight cars and approximately 400 locomotives were saved.

The railroad bridge over the Kama at Perm, 270 yards long, was put out of commission by the Siberian military before leaving. It is so seriously damaged, however, that it cannot be easily repaired. The complete span was dumped into the river.

The Kama fleet, thirty-nine vessels, several of which had been converted into gunboats, but later dismantled, was accidentally burned. General Jack left Perm four hours before the Bolsheviks began to fall in the town. With him came Otto T. Glaman, American vice consul, who had been asked by the Russian authorities to remain at his post as late as possible for the moral effect of his presence on the population during the days of evacuation. General Jack was found in his papers of Glaman for valuable assistance rendered him in keeping trains moving.

The peasant population as well as the bourgeoisie fled before the Bolshevik advance. Families loaded their possessions onto carts or box cars and took the road east. Every country road leading out was filled with these carts moving in caravans, leading cows and horses, often carrying pigs and fowls. It was not unusual to find a family of four or five crammed into a boxcar with all their domestic animals and household goods, bound eastward with no fixed destination.

Practically no stocks of merchandise were moved. The railway machine shops were left intact as were factories of all sorts, no effort having been made to destroy them as would probably have been the case if evacuating to a foreign foe.

WANTS TO SAVE PHEASANTS

Farmers in the Durkee district do not want the China pheasants killed, according to P. McGowan, game warden. As a result, special deputies have been appointed to arrest any hunters trespassing in that vicinity.

Four years ago they were able to secure only 48 birds, which are now just beginning to numerate well, and the people of that district believe that if they can protect them for one more year, that there will be plenty of game for everyone, as the place is fine for both feeding and breeding purposes. The grounds, which cover a distance of more than four miles, are owned by Orman, Alinsky, Albert, Hindman, Joe Moura and Gloux.
